U.S. Freeze Hits Canadians

Jeers Greet Council Okay Of Reid Plan

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE
Times Staff

Victoria council voted exactly as expected Thursday and approved in principle the modified Reid waterfront development despite noisy opposition from a packed chamber.

About 200 people of all ages virtually took over the council meeting, laughing derisively at Acting Mayor Ald. Percy Frampton's repeated demands for silence.

Several times the crowd refused to allow aldermen to be heard until they spoke into a microphone.

Only once did the crowd respect a plea for silence — when Ald. Peter Pollen said if they kept up the interruptions they would destroy democracy. However, they followed a lengthy speech by Pollen, who used the microphone, with applause and cheers.

Pollen and Ald. Tom Christie voted against further progress on the Reid development, fulfilling promises they made earlier to change their minds should enough people indicate opposition to the project.

The modified Reid complex proposed for the Wharf Street waterfront below Bastion Square includes two apartment towers of 24 and 21 storeys, as well as a theatre, a score of shops, green space, a public walking area and a water-level promenade.

It was the noisiest, best-attended council meeting in the past year. It was not a public hearing, however. On this basis, aldermen argued they were not required to speak up for the crowd's benefit.

No council session is considered an open public meeting at which people may speak out, applaud or even laugh within earshot of the chair. However, from the opening of the meeting, the crowd ignored the rules.

TRIED CHANGE

The action began when council came to an item on the agenda calling for a ban on all future high-rise development on the waterfront excepting the Reid development.

Christie immediately tried to amend the motion to eliminate the exception for Reid. The spectators refused to keep quiet until the city clerk read the amendments into a microphone placed in the chamber for use during an earlier public hearing.

Christie said "no one has approached me who is in favor of the Reid development. My phone rings constantly," he said, bringing calls from people opposing the development.

When Christie called the proposal a "disgrace," someone in the gallery shouted: "So is democracy."

He called for a show of hands from the gallery indicating opposition. He received a lot of hands and the

Oak Bay Crowd Hits Highrises

An overflow crowd of 100 Oak Bay residents at Windsor Park Pavilion Thursday condemned further high-rise development because it would cause deterioration of the municipality's residential character.

Called by the Windsor Park Neighborhood Group, most of the meeting's fire was aimed at the highrise towers proposed for the block facing Windsor Park, bounded by Currie, Goodwin, Windsor and Newport.

Graham Development Ltd. and Mace Homes and Investments Ltd. plan to build two nine-storey towers containing retail outlets on the ground floor and 200 suites in the other storeys.

HOLD OPTIONS

Questioned by Bertram Butler, 513 Transit, on whether the developers had bought the land, Mayor Frances Elford said that they hold options on the lots which would expire in November and December; necessitating decision-making by council by that time.

The developers have asked that the block be made a development area. The mayor said that although it was not required under the Municipal Act, a public hearing will be held Sept. 20 at 7:30 p.m. in St. Michael's School.

The hearing, she said, was called so that taxpayers could make their wishes known.

Later, another hearing, as required by the act, would be called to discuss specific plans of the developers.

BROADEN BASE

Dr. A. D. Kirk, 2453 Currie, asked what advantages highrises give the areas in which they were built. Did they, as argued, actually broaden the tax base?

He added that the cities of New York, Los Angeles and San Francisco had not convinced him that this was so.

Ald. John Goult replied that he had never been able to find evidence that highrises were beneficial to a community.

Developer Jim Mace was asked if the developers intended to raze the entire block if they did not begin construction of the two towers at the same time.

Mace estimated the entire project might take between two and two and a half years to complete. In material circulated to residents this week,

A full week of TV listings appears in tonight's Times opposite Page 8.

This special tabloid section can be pulled out, folded and kept handy to the television set for handy reference to daily TV programs.

This new feature will be published in every Friday's Times.

OFFENDING ARTICLES in Saturday copy of Vancouver Sun included Bank of Montreal advertisement (left) showing champagne bottle being smashed and feature story on wines (right). Steward aboard B.C. ferry Queen of Burnaby would not allow copies of the paper to be sold because he thought the articles contravened provincial government ban on liquor and tobacco advertising. Ferry authority officials Thursday said the restriction on selling the paper was a mistake and that ferry employees had "over-reacted." Debate on the law continues.

B.C. Grits Drop Support For Smoke, Drink Ad Ban

Liberal Leader Pat McGeer today announced his party no longer supports the tobacco and liquor advertising ban in British Columbia.

And NDP Opposition Leader Dave Barrett, contacted at his Coquitlam home, charged McGeer's "change of heart comes from The Vancouver Sun and nowhere else."

"If the establishment press in B.C. would only get as uptight about social injustices — 12-year-old children in training schools and the large number of Indians in jail — as it does about the loss of advertising revenue, then I would go along with its concern," he added.

McGeer called for a special legislative session to revoke the bans. The Liberals voted for the Tobacco Advertising Restraint Act and an amendment to the government Liquor Act, bills which halted tobacco and liquor advertising in B.C. Sept. 1.

The legislation was passed during the 1971 legislative session.

'CONFUSION'

McGeer charged Attorney-General Leslie Peterson evaded his administrative responsibilities to clarify the legislation by regulations.

"This has left the province in a state of confusion. We are now the laughing stock of North America, and the legislature has been made to look like an ass by Attorney-General Peterson," McGeer said.

Barrett, however, said that B.C. needs a special session of the legislature to discuss "real economic issues."

He said top priority is unemployment followed by the need for manufacturing industries to secure a good economic future for British Columbians.

'EXTINCT' OTTER RETURNS TO B.C.

The sighting of a sea otter with a pup recently off the west coast of Vancouver Island indicates a transplant of the mammals into the area has been a success.

Fish and wildlife branch officer Ian Smith of Nanaimo said Thursday a graduate student in zoology from the University of British Columbia had been studying birds in the area of Vargas Island, north of Tofino, when he sighted the sea otter and pup.

The student, Brian Hartwick, happened to have a movie camera with him at the time. Fish and wildlife branch officials who viewed the film Wednesday said the creatures were undoubtedly sea otters.

Sea otters are believed to have become extinct in B.C. in 1929. That was the time the last one was taken for commercial purposes.

Wildlife branch officials transplanted sea otters to the west coast in 1969 and 1970, but the sighting by Hartwick is the first indication that breeding has taken place.

"Our first hope was that the sea otters would survive," Smith said. "The next thing was for them to breed. We now have an indication that they have done the latter."

LOUGHEED FILLS CABINET POSTS

EDMONTON (CP) — Peter Lougheed was sworn in as premier today and he announced a 22-man Conservative cabinet to take over from 36 years of Social Credit rule.

The cabinet contains five more members than the outgoing administration and includes the new portfolios of deputy premier, and minister of federal and intergovernmental affairs. It also divides the education portfolio among two men.

Alberta Mines Recruit in Japan

EDMONTON (CP) — A shortage of experienced miners in Canada has forced coal producers in Alberta to look elsewhere for miners, including Japan.

McIntyre Porcupine Mines Ltd. has conducted a recruiting campaign in Japan and has received 52 applications for work at its Grande Cache mine, 200 miles west of here.

"Canadians won't stay in the coal mines even if they have had mining experience in eastern Canada," a provincial government mining spokesman said.

"The Grande Cache mine requires a lot of dirty manual work under close supervision. The miners from eastern Canada prefer the highly mechanized hard-rock mining."

Shuji Shigihara, Japanese consul in Edmonton, said experienced Japanese workers are needed to bring the Grande Cache mine's production up to the level called for in a 15-year contract with Japanese steel interests.

Five Japanese miners who speak English already are working at the McIntyre Porcupine mine. Another 40 are expected to arrive at Grande Cache early next year, if they can obtain visas.

One problem is that immigrants can enter Canada without speaking English or French only if they have a job and can meet various other requirements. But Alberta mine safety regulations require that miners be able to read safety regulations in English, and to know sufficient English to understand spoken warnings or to warn their fellow workers.

If the Japanese miners cannot meet this regulation, they couldn't gain employment and entry into Canada.

The mining company can solve the problem by hiring the men as trainees and teaching them English before putting them to work. McIntyre Porcupine has conducted English courses before and plans a language program for the Japanese miners.

Earlier this week, spokesmen for Japanese coal importers said in Vancouver that Japan will sign no further contracts until western Canadian mines start meeting existing contracts. The spokesmen said existing contracts might have to be reduced if the mines "can't fulfill their contracts."

An official of District 18 of the United Mine Workers of America said today the union is not opposed to the company recruiting in Japan.

Donald McDonald of Calgary, a district representative for the union, agreed that there is a shortage of experienced miners.

He said the only place where there may be a surplus of miners is in Nova Scotia.

It was customary for the Grande Cache mine to recruit from "almost all over." There were about 500 miners at Grande Cache and they come from "almost every country in the world, including Korea."

VALLIERES 'HIDES', MISSES HEARING

MONTREAL (CP) — A note purporting to be from the terrorist Front de Liberation du Quebec, saying author Pierre Vallieres has gone into hiding, was published today by two Montreal newspapers.

Vallieres, author of White Niggers of America, did not appear in court as scheduled Tuesday to have trial dates set for trial on charges of sedition and counselling to kidnapping and murder.

The note published in Montreal-Matin and the Journal de Montreal says Vallieres went into hiding "because there are more important things for a revolutionary to do in Quebec than to submit interminably to fake political trials."

Salary Controls 'Imported'

OTTAWA (CP)—The waves from United States economic moves continued to surge through the Commons today, with opposition calls for emergency debate and charges that Canadian subsidiaries are importing President Nixon's wage freeze.

Government spokesmen said that U.S. policy does not apply in Canada and promised a check of two specific situations of wage freeze action cited by the opposition.

New Democrat Leader David Lewis said the Douglas Aircraft of Canada Ltd. plant in Toronto has refused to make a wage offer to its employees and Chrysler Canada Ltd. in Windsor, Ont. has refused to put a wage increase, previously negotiated, into effect. In both cases, Mr. Lewis said, Mr. Nixon's wage freeze was given as the reason.

Mr. Lewis called for a government statement assuring the House that Canada would not tolerate any "importing of wage freezes" from outside the country.

External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp, acting prime minister while Pierre Elliott Trudeau is on a tour of eastern Ontario ridings, said he was not aware of the Douglas and Chrysler situations. But he added that everybody knows it is the Canadian Parliament that makes Canadian laws.

Mr. Lewis said Douglas and Chrysler obviously did not know this.

Mr. Sharp said any importation of the wage freeze is "not Canadian and this is not Canadian policy."

PEPIN CHECKING

Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin, replying to further questions, said he was having the situation checked to see "how true it is."

Chrysler announced Thursday a deferment of a five-percent salary increase for many of its employees which was supposed to have been put into effect Sept. 6. The company said the move was necessary because 1972 model prices have been frozen at the 1971 level to conform with U.S. prices set under the Nixon program.

At Douglas, a spokesman said the U.S. wage freeze is the reason the company has refused to make any wage offer to employees in current contract negotiations.

A total of some 7,000 Canadian workers are involved in the two situations.

J. Patrick Nowlan (PC-Annapolis Valley) asked Mr. Pepin whether the government would re-stress the guides it drew up a few years ago on how subsidiaries of foreign companies can be good corporate citizens of Canada.

The guides are still applicable, Mr. Pepin said. He added that he has been talking with many heads of international companies in Canada since Mr. Nixon announced the import surtax last month.

In the debate on Thursday, Eric Kierans said Canada is going to have to get tough internationally to avoid slipping down the economic drain.

Mr. Kierans, who quit the Liberal cabinet in April because he disagreed with government economic policies, said Canada is faced with a productivity crisis similar to the one that prompted President Nixon's drastic change in U.S. economic policy.

While he did not recommend a price-and-wage freeze, he said labor and business and the federal and provincial governments must identify Canada's chief national goal as high employment and unify to bring it about.

CHUGS FROM NOWHERE TO EVERYWHERE

PGE Carries 'The Future' to Fort Nelson

By BRUCE YEMEN
Times Staff

FORT NELSON — The future arrived in Fort Nelson today when the first train from Fort St. John pulled in to the Pacific Great Eastern Railways yards near this northern town, 80 miles from the Yukon border.

The train carried Premier W. A. C. Bennett, president of the publicly-owned railway, and about 70 executives from business, industry and government.

The premier officially opened the 250-mile stretch of track from Fort St. John in an early afternoon ceremony attended by several hundred other businessmen and enthusiastic residents of the Fort Nelson area. Population of this community is about 4,000.

GRIEVANCES

A threatened stoppage of the train by Indians claiming compensation for land crossed by the track failed to occur, but a small delegation presented grievances to government officials here today.

The clearing for the new line began in February, 1969, and 300 men were employed on construction.

Bennett inherited the publicly-owned railway almost 20 years ago with its ghastly record of losses and a track that was usually described as running from nowhere to nowhere.

He connected the southern nowhere — Squamish — to North Vancouver. He started extending the northern nowheres to what now seems almost everywhere.

The operating losses continued, but in moderate tempo until recently, when profits have been claimed. Last year an $896,000 net profit was reported.

Critics of the government, however, take the profit statements with a grain of salt, because they know the taxpayers of B.C. have $160 million in "shares" in the PGE which pay no dividends.

INTEREST

It would cost $8 million a year to pay interest of only 5 per cent on that investment. The operating revenues from the PGE amounted to $31 million last year. From that was paid more than $8 million in interest on another $170 million of funded debt.

Bennett and general manager Joe Broadbent weren't too impressed earlier this year with a federal transport official's claim that the PGE would show a $15 million annual loss if the books were figured on the same basis as other railways.

They scoffed at the claim, making special note of the fact that the PGE gets no federal subsidies, unlike other railways.

The extent to which it gets provincial subsidies is partly a result of Ottawa's refusal to share in the costs of expanding the railway. Bennett appears to have given up real hope of federal money for the PGE.

Earlier this week the provincial cabinet allowed the PGE to increase its potential share capital from the current $160 million to $210 million, raising the prospect of another $50 million "investment" by the taxpayers in the PGE in the next year or two.

If nobody is laughing, few seem to be crying about the cost of keeping the PGE growing. Opposition parties have made little political capital out of the PGE in recent years.

It isn't so much the railway itself, but its labor policies that have attracted criticisms. The rush to finish the 250-mile extension to Fort Nel-

NELSON FORKS NEXT STOP

Bennett's Order to PGE—Northward Ho!

By BRUCE YEMEN
Times Staff

FORT NELSON — Premier Bennett announced today that survey crews are now working on plans to extend the Pacific Great Eastern to Nelson Forks, 80 miles north of Fort Nelson, near the Yukon border.

Bennett said the extension is part of "a double advance into the North."

PGE rails are expected to reach Dease Lake in 1974, he said, and from there "opportunity beckons us even farther north . . . perhaps a link with Alaska's state railway."

Bennett made the announcement during official opening ceremonies for the 250-mile rail link between Fort St. John and Fort Nelson.

He was made a member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers prior to his taking the controls of the first train southbound here.

FORT NELSON — Attorney-General Peterson said today that national publications containing liquor and cigarette ads should continue to be sold in B.C. until the government's legislation banning such advertising is clarified by the courts.

He said the magazines should be distributed "so the public may continue to have the benefit of the publication."

The court case which may clarify the advertising ban was launched during the summer against the government by eight companies. The case is expected to be heard later this fall.

slam of the gavel by Frampton.

When Pollen rose to second Christie's motion, he said: "I heard someone say den.ocracy's a disgrace." Saying some young people apparently hold that view, he stated: "You just keep it up and you'll destroy it."

Pollen said he wanted to persuade aldermen to think of future generations. He said he had been "instrumental" in the "so-called compromise" because he thought he might be able to turn the "monster" into a "eunuch."

He said, however, that he now believes the compromise was useless.

"I never changed my opinion, but I have withdrawn my compromise."

He called "prehistoric" the arguments that the Reid development should be approved because at present the harbor waterfront construction is derelict.

He said other arguments that the city could be sued by developer J. A. Reid for not allowing construction were "irresponsible." Pollen said the "only liability is to the citizens of Victoria."

PARK

He said no business would thrive under the shadow of the Reid centre, but business would definitely prosper if it were ringed with an Inner Harbor waterfront park.

As for guarantees to Reid that he could build, Pollen said "some civil servants encouraged him but no one guaranteed him anything."

Pollen said the city could buy the Reid property, which he said had fetched $600,000, by reversing public works decisions made in the "gloomy days" that would free enough money for the purchase.

He said many of the road improvement capital projects approved by the city earlier are almost "make-work" projects, "yet we can't afford to buy an absolutely irreplaceable asset," the waterfront property.

He said the same expediency that justified cutting Central Park in half for a swimming pool was being used to justify the Reid development.

'ASLEEP'

Pollen also criticized the provincial government for being "absolutely asleep to the developing urban crisis."

The only alderman to speak in favor of the development was Old. Ove Witt, whose short speech was met with loud jeering and booing from the gallery.

Claiming opponents of the Reid centre were speaking "insincerely," Witt said his own comments were sincere.

He said the issue had been "blown up out of all proportion by wild statements and wild (press) reporting."

Attacking arguments that the Reid centre would ruin the Inner Harbor view, Witt asked: "What view?"

His question was met with many shouted answers, including "water" and "more highrises."

'IN FAVOR'

"I am in favor . . ." Witt continued amidst loud booing, "of the Reid centre because I think it will pull the city up by its bootstraps."

Witt said the city is dying and added "you don't die when you pump life into a sick body."

Pollen asked for the opinion of the director of city planning, Geoffrey Greenhalgh, but was told Greenhalgh was on vacation. Assistant planner Peter Crisp was present but was not asked to speak.

City solicitor Terrence O'Grady had earlier told council, in reply to questions, that if the city wished to drastically change the ground rules for developing in a specific area, "you should buy" the property concerned. But he added "you may zone down (place some restrictions) within reason."

Architect Gerald Hamilton told the meeting "in all fairness there hadn't been "much understanding" of the project. He said the development would be "not a monster but an asset to the city."

SLIM TOWERS

The high-rises on the project "are in actual fact slim towers," Hamilton said.

Hamilton produced some sketch drawings and scale plans but said citizens would get ample time to see better drawings and a model at the public hearing which must be held for final approval. (No date for the hearing has been set.)

Before the vote was taken, Pollen attempted to get an opinion or statement from planning chairman Ald. Harold Olafson.

Olafson replied, however, that "I am not on trial here" and denied he was required to speak.

Mayor Courtney Haddock and Ald. Robert Baird were not present, leaving Ald. Witt, Hugh Ramsay, Clyde Savage and Olafson voting for approval in principle. Frampton was in the chair and did not vote.

After 8 Months' Captivity A Prayer of Thanks . . .

From AP - Reuter

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay (CP) — After eight months in captivity, British Ambassador Geoffrey Jackson was released by his guerrilla captors Thursday night on the steps of a Roman Catholic church. He went inside, received communion and offered a prayer of thanks.

He had been held in a dark, underground "people's jail" for 245 days, the longest confinement in the recent spate of political kidnappings. But doctors said the 56-year-old diplomat was in good health, and after a physical examination he went to the British embassy to rest.

The leftist Tupamaros guerrillas, who had seized Jackson on a Montevideo street Jan. 8, said in pamphlets scattered at a leftist political rally Wednesday night that they had granted amnesty to the diplomat.

There was no further need to hold the ambassador, the pamphlets said, because the Tupamaros had already won their "fight for political prisoners," a reference to the mass jailbreak Monday of 105 Tupamaros.

In Washington, a Labor member of British Parliament. Judith Hart, said she had been told by President Salvador Allende of Chile on Sept. 1 that Jackson would be released shortly. But there was no immediate indication that the Marxist president played a role in the diplomat's release.

A priest at the Church of St. Francis of Assisi, in the Montevideo suburb of Nuevo Paris, told authorities Jackson knocked on the door at 7:55 p.m.

WORE BLINDFOLD

He was blindfolded, freshly shaven and wearing the "same light suit he had on when he was kidnapped," Rev. Jose Maria said.

"He looked very well. If I had met him in the street, I wouldn't have recognized him. He was fine, spiritually perfect and normal."

The priest said he asked Jackson if the authorities should be notified and the diplomat replied: "No, I have to wait here until they come for me from the embassy."

Police said embassy officials arrived 10 minutes later, after the British Embassy received an anonymous phone call giving the diplomat's whereabouts.

Jackson, a Roman Catholic, stayed in the church about 50 minutes, Father Jose Maria said, and during that time he attended confession, received holy communion and gave thanks for his release.

Embassy sources said Jackson phoned the foreign office in London to report on the circumstances of his captivity, and also spoke to his wife, Evelyn, who returned to London from Montevideo two days after the ambassador was kidnapped.

In London, Mrs. Jackson expressed her delight that her husband had been freed. "This is absolutely marvellous," she was quoted by a Daily Mail reporter.

"I have been praying so hard to believe that my husband is free at last," she told the reporter. "I am overjoyed."

Jackson served as the senior British trade commissioner in Toronto before coming to Montevideo in July, 1969.

The Tupamaro pamphlets signalling Jackson's release also hinted that the guerrillas would end their terrorist activities and instead work actively for a coalition of five leftist parties that is challenging the conservative government in general elections Nov. 28.

But several hours after Jackson was released the government announced that for the first time in Uruguay's history the army would join police in the battle against the Tupamaros.

The Tupamaros still hold four hostages—three Uruguayans and one Argentine.

. . . OAK BAY

his firm had said the second tower might be delayed until the first was fully occupied. He said Thursday he felt it doubtful the entire block would be razed if such a delay was necessary.

GO SO HIGH

Peter Bunn, 888 Linkleas, was applauded, when he said:

"We are told that they (developers) have to pay $10 a square foot and that's why they have to go up so high. That's their ruddy problem not mine. We have to make damned certain that we elect aldermen who won't go for this sort of thing."

One woman pointed out that Windsor Park was one of Oak Bay's most-used recreation areas and that the proposed complex would increase car traffic by hundreds in an area widely frequented by children.

Concern was also expressed by the effect the traffic would have on St. Christopher's School, a kindergarten on Currie.

Goult said the basic problem facing council was the question of how to renew rundown areas.

BLOCK RENEWED

Several of those present said they would like to see the block renewed with stores and other buildings more in keeping with the area.

Capt. A. B. Arnison, 942 Newport, said there was no basis in the contention that highrises were needed for long-time Oak Bay residents when they were no longer capable of keeping up their homes.

He contended: "People who retired, say 10 years ago won't have pensions that will allow them to pay $400 (a month) for an apartment. They are for people in the $18,000 or $20,000 bracket. Don't think we're catering to long-time residents."

It was decided to prepare two studies — one on the traffic needs of the area and the other, a consensus of residents' views on what development would be acceptable on the contentious block.

Arbitrator Opposed

The International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers intends to oppose any application to the courts to appoint an arbitrator in its contract dispute with B.C. Hydro, business agent Doug Cronk of Vancouver said today.

He said the union will contend that it is not bound by the Arbitration Act and that the courts do not have jurisdiction to make an appointment.

by liquor and tobacco companies on advertising should be put into a prevention and education fund, and the provincial government should contribute an equal amount, Barrett said.

A total of eight companies have brought actions before B.C. Supreme court contesting the province's power to ban the advertising.

McGeer said the legislation is so badly drafted that he doubts the courts will be able to settle anything. He said Liberal MLA Garde Gardom (Vancouver Point-Grey) told Peterson during the last session that the bills were badly worded.

CAPITAL SCENE

Sidney Silver Threads Service will hold an open house Sunday from 6-9 p.m. at the branch's new centre, 10030 Resthaven Drive. The centre will be open for drop-ins Monday through Friday next week from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. A Centennial pot luck dinner and dance will be held Sept. 24, starting at 5:30 p.m.

. . . PGE TAKES 'THE FUTURE' NORTH

son in recent days has focused interest on the railway's practice of relying on Portuguese workers to build its tracks, working as much as 60 hours a week on a six-day basis without overtime.

CONCERN

The pace of expansion has caused some concern not only for the rights of the railway construction workers but also for the environmental future of the land being opened up by the PGE.

As in the other Stikine-Iskut area of northwest B.C., where huge deposits of mineral wealth are located, exploitation of the resources awaits the railway's arrival. It is expected to arrive in two or three years.

The Brinco corporation is currently studying potential hydro electric development to provide power for the industries that the PGE will service.

There is fear that all the major decisions about the northern ecology are being made by the development-oriented thrust of PGE rails.

There's a lot of rail. With the completion of the Fort Nelson link and the 419-mile Dease Lake extension, currently being built, the railway will have 1,530 miles of mainline track, second only to the CPR in B.C.

TAP YUKON

Bennett would now like to tap the markets of the Yukon and the surrounding area, but he will have to make some deals with other governments to bring that off.

Since he has beaten the federal government to the punch in northern railroad-building he may be in a strong negotiating position to get lucrative new links with the PGE above the provincial boundary, which is only 130 miles north of Fort Nelson.

In the meantime, the PGE has served the purpose of opening up the interior and north of the province of a rate which could make Bennett's own dreams of a great northern future come true even faster than he himself may imagine.

When that day comes, he has suggested, the capital city of B.C. will have to be moved closer to the economic and geographical centre of the province, perhaps Vanderhoof. He said it might take a century or so.

Long Beach Hunting Prohibited

Hunting will be prohibited in the Long Beach and Broken Island parts of Pacific Rim National Park when the season opens Saturday, R. P. Malis, regional director of national and historic parks said today.

The two areas, although still in the development state, come under the jurisdiction of the National Parks Act, while the third phase, the proposed 40-mile West Coast Trail area, remains under provincial control.

The preservation of wildlife in its natural state for the education and enjoyment of the public is a vital element of national park's policy, Malis said, and this precludes hunting.

However, he added, the traditional rights of Indian bands to hunt on their reservations within the boundaries are not affected by the ban as these lands are not under park jurisdiction.

Stray Feathers

By HAROLD HOSFORD

Did you ever stop to think that the story of forest fires may not be all bad? I'll not deny a fire's destructive power, or belittle the loss in valuable standing timber, future forest harvests, wildlife, human life and even property, but is this the whole story?

From the rather limited point of view of modern technological man, it may seem so. This is the economic point of view, the one most of us have accepted for years.

But what of the ecological point of view — that of a dynamic, ever-changing environment where a succession of ecosystems builds one on the other to produce an intricate mosaic life? Forest fires play an important, nay essential, role in this, and one which all too often is overlooked or ignored.

There is no doubt that primitive man used fire to control his environment. Early North American explorers documented the devastating fires set by plains Indians to influence the movements of the buffalo. Inadvertently these fires were important factors in maintaining grassland habitat — particularly where it gradually blended into the forest. The fires held back the forest and stimulated grass growth.

PUNY EFFORTS

But long before the comparatively puny efforts of the Indians began to affect the environment, natural fires — usually started by lightning — were playing a role. In the changes wrought by these fires — over thousands of years — many kinds of plants and animals were finding niches which they could exploit.

For a few years in the sunlight-bathed second growth that followed a fire, these plants and animals would thrive, only to die out, or leave, as the forest matured.

The life of a man is often too short to live through the whole pattern of change but many have seen pieces of it. By patching these pieces together we can now see the whole spectrum of succession from burned-over land to climax forest and the kinds of plants and animals which occupy each stage.

BEEN JOINED

Today fire has been joined by clear-cutting to create vast new areas for succession to begin. Black-tailed and mule deer both take advantage of the heavy deciduous growth that follows clearing by fire and man.

Blue grouse, too benefit from forest fires. They often move into the lush growth that invades a recently burned or cleared area. But in a few years, as the growth thickens and begins to mature, they desert the area in search of another newly opened spot.

One of the most devastating and costly fires in Manitoba history created the kind of environment that resulted in a spectacular increase in elk. Back in 1959, Manitoba's Duck Mountains were blanketed in a mature growth of commercially valuable white spruce. But as elk habitat, it was a dead loss.

ELK HABITAT

Today, 210,000 acres of that white spruce is a tangle of saskatoon, aspen, hazel, interspersed with open grassy meadows — prime elk habitat in Manitoba. And all because of a forest fire.

In Michigan's Lower Peninsula lives a tiny bird — Kirtland's Warbler — whose life is so closely linked to forest fires that a decade ago its survival seemed doubtful because of the efficiency of fire control in the state.

Today, Kirtland's Warbler is unique. It is the only North American songbird subsidized by State and Federal Funds and enjoying life in its own protected management areas.

With a population believed to be below 1,000 10 years ago, Kirtland's Warbler led a rather precarious existence. It summered in a few counties of the jack pine, sand country between lakes Huron and Michigan. Winter found it 2,000 miles southeast, in the Bahamas.

KEY TO LIFE

Jack pine, particularly young and from 5 to 15 feet high, were the key to life for Kirtland's Warbler. As soon as the young trees matured beyond this size, the birds left. Only a regular succession of new growth could ensure their survival.

Jack pine itself is a peculiar species — obviously adapted to fires, because only intense heat or scorching fire will release its seeds from the cone.

Technology came to the aid of the warblers in the form of a regulated cutting and planting program. The sturdier red pine has replaced jack pine in many areas and today while forest fires are almost a thing of the past, Kirtland's Warblers thrive in their man-made environment.

But it was fire — fosest fire — that made them what they are.

Oil Objections Studied

By PAUL JACKSON
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — External Affairs Minister Sharp says he has been "assured" U.S. authorities are studying Canada's objections to plans of moving Alaska oil through the Puget Sound area off the British Columbia coast.

Sharp was replying to questions by Progressive Conservative Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield who asked whether the external affairs minister had anything positive to report on the situation.

Sharp said aside from having been told Canada's representations "as to the unfortunate effect of the movement of oil through these narrow waters" were being studied he could add nothing.

Outside the House, David Anderson, Liberal MP for Esquimalt-Saanich, said that every day the U.S. delays in announcing plans to go ahead with shipping Alaska oil down the coast to refineries in Washington state is good for Canada.

"If we can say that every day technology for moving the oil from the Alaska port of Valdez improves, then every day of delay in a decision is good news," said Anderson.

Anderson is parliament's most outspoken critic of the proposed plan to send the super tankers down the B.C. coast.

He says a disaster is inevitable between the tankers and other ships. If an oil spill occurs, he says 1,000 miles of coastline will be ruined and marine and birdlife will suffer immense harm.

Opposition Voices

WHILE SHOUTING AND INterference by the public at a city council meeting is certainly not to be condoned, there could be no mistaking the feelings of Victorians at yesterday's council session at which the Reid highrise development was given agreement in principle. The public's opinion was easily predictable, but the attitude of some of the aldermen was less expected.

There was some aldermanic feeling, for instance, that because the meeting was not a public hearing, they were under no obligation to make their words about public business audible to the crowd! What kind of behavior is that for elected representatives of the people — or so they called themselves at election time — when discussing an issue that has been of intense public interest for many months? Equally inexplicable was the refusal of the chairman of the planning committee to make a statement on the Reid matter, on the odd grounds that he was "not on trial here." What sort of civic leadership is this?

Is it this attitude by some aldermen that has led to many months of inexcusable fumbling of the whole issue, ending in a decision that one promoter can build highrises on the waterfront but nobody else can — an obvious admission that they have worked their way into an impossible corner?

Decision on the Reid proposal in principle, opposed by only two aldermen, Mr. Christie and Mr. Pollen, is now formal, and the next step is to present specific plans — they are all pretty general so far — to a public meeting where questions can be asked and opinions stated. It is a late date for that, although it has not been legally necessary before now. One wonders what would be the result if the issue itself were put to a popular vote — also not legally required. There is a nagging feeling that city council is acting contrary to the wishes of a large majority of the citizens, but throughout the whole long controversy there has been no disposition on the part of the aldermen generally to find out.

Opposition is a rear-guard struggle now, but there is still a possibility that public pressure may be able to force a toning down of the highrise portion of the Reid concept while still retaining the attractive features of the waterfront development.

But if all this fails, then the next job for council will be to get busy on plans to cope with the street traffic, sewage, water pressure and other problems that will inevitably follow the intrusion of highrise construction on Wharf Street. Let us hope that next year's council will be of a calibre to handle these essential problems with a better appearance of competence than we have seen this year.

No Ray of Hope?

THE CONTINUING TRAGEDY of Northern Ireland appears farther from a solution today than it was many months ago. The mounting toll of dead and injured, the endless property damage, the plight of fleeing refugees — all these are acting to increase hatreds and engender still more reprisals. The growing intervention of the IRA has worsened the situation and it is difficult to see how the integration of largely Protestant Ulster into Catholic Eire will provide the solution which some non-combatants, in desperation, are urging.

The extent of the conflict has caused some reversals of British policy. Parliament will gather a month early at Westminster to debate the critical situation — a step which previously the government refused to take. And there is some prospect that the prime minister of the Irish Republic will be brought into a three-way conference with the prime ministers of Britain and Northern Ireland. Such a meeting itself could constitute a danger, for whether it came up with a decision on what to do, or broke up in disagreement, one side or the other in Ulster might find further incentive towards acts of anger or desperation.

Some close observers of the problem have declared their conviction that there just is no practicable solution — that the factors of history and human temperament make agreement impossible. Unending violence and instability cannot be the only answer — but a reasonable prospect of even semi-peace at any early date just doesn't seem to exist.

When Is a Job a Job?

BEGINNING IN NOVEMBER the provincial government will assist welfare recipients by paying half the salary of those who find jobs — for at least the first six months. Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell has made it clear that public agencies like municipalities, school boards and hospital boards will be the principal sources of jobs.

The scheme has the look of a public works program wrapped in novel political tinsel. Superficially attractive, since no one wants unemployment, it may prove to be no more than a statistical palliative. Permanent, substantial relief should be the goal of any employment scheme carried out by the state. When, the taxpayer must ask, is a job a job and when is it just a boondoggle?

When the winter has passed, persons involved in the program may be back where they started, on the unemployment rolls — or they may become permanent occupants of unnecessary jobs. In that case, the coffers of the municipalities may be strained to the breaking point. NDP Leader Dave Barrett has produced figures which indicate the municipalities could end up paying considerably more than they do now for the new form of relief. Ottawa will not be involved through the Canada Assistance Plan in the new make-work program.

For a worker, trying to get his family through the winter, the scheme must have much to commend it. The mere fact of being employed, rather than on direct assistance, should have great psychological benefit. But he will have over him the constant threat that his six months is running out. There can be no real alternative to productive labor on an economically valid, permanent basis.

It Will Bear Watching

SOLICITOR GENERAL GOYER'S new special security unit, while no laughing matter in its implications of constant surveillance of Canadian civilians, has roused an element of humor in Ottawa. Volunteer wits are trying to produce the name of the game. What has every mark of a form of secret police — work which has traditionally been done by the respected RCMP — is being called "Goyer's Gumshoes" as a top choice. We shall be fortunate if the whole concept retains that light-hearted status.

Mr. Trudeau has designated the security apparatus as a small unit to co-ordinate facts and findings from various sources — a harmless enough pastime if only we could be more confident of the types of facts and sources.

The danger is that once this sort of security "necessity" becomes established — three men at present but 20 in prospect — it is very difficult to get rid of it. It could go on spying and proliferating in back rooms until it became a menace to traditional Canadian customs. By that time, funny names would be long out-grown.

". . . so far, still no sign of Hellyermania . . ."

FROM WASHINGTON — By TOM BRADEN

Odd Goings-On at the White House

SOMETHING very odd is suggested by the political polls which show that President Nixon — as of now — can defeat any of his prospective opponents. Surely the oddity cannot have escaped the attention of Richard Nixon, returned now to this steaming hot city after the most successful summer of his term.

The oddity must be looked at against the fact that when the summer began the polls were all against the President. They showed that Sen. Muskie could beat him and that Sens. Kennedy and Humphrey might beat him. But now — as one of the President's key aides remarked, prior to packing up at San Clemente — "Things are looking up." Why?

President's Summer

Three major events have marked the presidential summer. First, there was Henry Kissinger's trip to China and the announcement that the President would travel there to meet with Chou En-lai.

Second, there was the announcement of wage and price controls.

Third was the signing of the treaty recognizing the status quo in Germany.

These three events are the only possible reason for the dramatic turnaround in the polls and these three events have one thing in common. It is that they mark an activist President, with a style nearer to Franklin Roosevelt than Dwight Eisenhower, and a set of beliefs more pragmatic than conservative.

Indeed, all of the things that the President did over the summer would have maddened conservatives within his own party only a few years ago.

The trip to China and wage-price controls represent a total break with conservative ideology. The Berlin Accords have so far passed unnoticed by the right wing. It is astonishing that less than 25 years after the Berlin uprising, nobody has accused the President of surrendering the John Foster Dulles doctrine of "rolling back the Iron Curtain."

In short, the oddity is that as the President has departed conservative ideology, he has grown more popular. Democrats are running around in circles trying to find some reason for criticizing policies they were recently recommending. Conservatives within the President's party can be put off with a few remarks against bussing schoolchildren. In any event, they have nowhere else to go.

The polls suggest the oddity and the oddity suggests the future. Having found the road to popularity, Mr. Nixon is not likely to seek any other path. From now until election time we shall be watching an activist President "doing something" about the nation's problems and making all those Democratic speeches about "drifting" exceedingly out of date.

For example, something is surely in the wind respecting an early settlement in Vietnam. Mr. Nixon cannot go before the electorate next year with any prospect of success unless he can first get American combat troops out of Vietnam. The betting here is that he will do so, that his doing so is in some way tied to his China trip, and that the China trip will take place much sooner than anyone has suggested — perhaps as soon as mid-October.

Early Peking Visit

And why not? President Thieu has made a farce out of President Nixon's promise to give a free and democratic government a chance to survive in South Vietnam. If the President cannot deal with South Vietnamese, the North Vietnamese are at hand.

Perhaps, the oddity suggested by the polls reflects another oddity, a national misjudgment of Richard Nixon. He made a name for himself as a conservative ideologue when it was highly popular to be a conservative ideologue. Along the way he has dropped an occasional hint about the inner man. For example, he once listed Theodore Roosevelt, Frankin Roosevelt and Woodrow Wilson among Presidents he most admired. That should have given us the clue that we were dealing with a man who cares a lot more about practicality than about principle.

FROM TORONTO — By HAROLD GREER

Doctors' Dilemma: Ontario's Cheaper Drugs

A DOCTOR friend of mine was sneering the other day at PARCOST, the Ontario government's program to reduce the price of prescription drugs. He never consulted the Comparative Drug Index supplied by the government and he couldn't recall that he had even read it. It was just ridiculous, he said, to suggest one drug product is as good as another. For example, he said, he had had about 100 women patients for whom he had prescribed a particular oral tranquilizer. This product is so expensive that the Toronto Welfare Department refuses to pay for it on the ground that just-as-good tranquilizers are available at one-third to one-half the cost.

Greer

So my doctor friend agreed to substitute a cheaper prescription for his welfare patients, rather than cause them economic hardships, and in every case they reported undesirable side effects from the cheaper product, such as nausea or headaches. He restored his original prescription and no side effects were reported. Ergo, the cheaper product was obviously therapeutically inferior, and no government committee would convince him otherwise.

Thorough Evaluation

In fact, the two products in question are included in the Comparative Drug Index and both have been thoroughly evaluated by the government's independent Drug Quality and Therapeutics Committee headed by Dr. W. T. W. Clarke, head of the division of therapeutics at the University of Toronto. Chemically they are similar and clinically the Committee found that, if anything, the cheaper drug has a slight edge. It sells at half the price of the more expensive product.

Apparently my friend's experience must be put down as one of the mysteries of medicine or — more likely, to his antipathy to a program that smacks of government interference with the practice of medicine.

He is not alone in his prejudice. As a recent McMaster University survey showed, PARCOST is not working: it has had little impact on the price of drugs since its introduction almost a year ago because physicians generally are not using it, and they are not using it because they don't trust it.

Essentially, PARCOST is an agreement between the government and participating pharmacies (which means about 70 per cent of the pharmacies in the province) whereby the pharmacist charges the product cost as listed in the Comparative Drug Index plus a dispensing fee of $2.00 maximum (the actual average is $1.82). The pharmacist agrees to dispense only products listed in the Index unless directed otherwise by the physician.

Lower Cost

There are two ways in which this can conceivably lower the cost of drugs to the consumer. If the physician prescribes generically — so much tolbutamide, say — the pharmacist has seven products in the Index to choose from and they vary in price from 6.8 cents to 1.3 cents a tablet.

He has the assurance of Dr. Clarke's quality control committee that all are of "comparable therapeutic value" and since his prescription price is product cost plus dispensing fee, he makes no money on the higher-priced products and might as well save the consumer money by dispensing the cheapest.

Alternatively, if the physician does not prescribe generically, he may consult the Index before making out his prescription and select a cheaper product himself, again with the assurance of quality control from Dr. Clarke's committee of experts.

Many doctors, however, and certainly a majority of those who have been out of medical school more than a few years, are against generic prescriptions; they identify them with low-priced preparations of questionable quality. And most doctors, as the McMaster survey showed, are not bothering to consult the Index because they do not understand or do not accept that all the products therein listed are of good quality and of "comparable therapeutic value" for the purpose stated.

Partly this is because the government has failed to explain the Index clearly enough. The McMaster survey, for example, elicited many doctor complaints that the Index is incomplete, that many drugs are not listed. In fact, if a particular product is not included (and many are not) in the generic categories compiled by Dr. Clarke's Committee so far, it is because it has failed to meet the committee's standards.

Many doctors might take a different view of the matter if they realized they are still relying on old favorites which have a quality question-mark over them. But the government has soft-pedalled this aspect rather than harm the companies in question.

Largely, however, the medical profession has not bought PARCOST because it has not bought the argument that one drug product can be just as good as another. In claiming "comparable therapeutic value" for products categorized in the Index, Dr. Clarke's Committee has carefully refrained from claiming therapeutic equivalence and what the doctors want is a guarantee of equivalence. As Dr. Bette Stephenson, the then president of the Ontario Medical Association, wrote in the O.M.A. Journal last March:

Therapeutic Effect

"In the government PARCOST program, there is no guarantee of therapeutic equivalency, nor will there be such a guarantee in the foreseeable future. The cost of the drug analysis needed to give a comparison of this sort would be considerable and at present no level of government is equipped to do this. The reluctance of our profession to change prescribing habits for something less than a large financial difference to the patient is understandable and defensible."

But in fact Dr. Clarke's Committee is working toward a guarantee of equivalence and next spring's edition of the Index will probably make such a claim, although the term "interchangeable" is being favored.

Slash Burning

Broadcast burning of logging waste usually creates a worse hazard than the condition which it is supposed to alleviate.

This is due to surviving trees and saplings being killed but not consumed — both throughout the area logged in various ways and around the borders thereof. It has become customary to start slash fires in hot weather so as to secure a "good burn" and consequently many escapes have taken place. These occurrences do not seem to be reported; it is merely noted that so many thousand acres were "successfully abated."

Much of the coast logging takes place on steep hillsides and after a slash burn there is bare rock, which had supported a loggable stand before the soil had been burned off.

Natural seedlings grow better and faster from the original moss or "duff" and sheltered by occasional decaying debris. So the argument for site improvement by burning is fallacious.

Forest Service spokesmen often apologize for the evil of slash-burning at this time in our history, conscious as they undoubtedly are that an appalling waste is being perpetrated.

The solution, of course, is to remove all the wood from the ground, except thrifty young trees and strategic seed trees. This would result in the production of millions of cords or units of extra wood per year and could be ensured by suitable encouragement to the industry, which, when the procedures became customary, would be very happy with it.

There are instances of the use of efficient harvesting and processing machines and men able and willing to get the most out of them.

But even before this ideal can come about, it is safer and better to allow what debris is left, after the logging efforts, to rot on the ground, permitting the new forest to spring up much more rapidly.

These remarks are on the strength of observations made during 22 years in logging engineering in Oregon followed by 25 years in the same pursuit in British Columbia.

Forty-three of these years were as Chief Engineer or Consultant. — Owen Goward, P. Eng., 2495 Arbutus Rd.

Women's View

I would like to reply to a letter in the Victoria Times, Aug. 31, 1971 — signed a Former Sympathizer.

Undoubtedly the Sandringham strike, because it occurred in a field of essential services to people, and because of the issues involved, and because of the duration, and increasing hostilities engendered, is the concern of every responsible citizen in this community, as well as of women's groups and any others that want to follow-up and implement the Status of Women Report recommendations.

These are facts from the Status of Women Report that I find are relevant to the strike situation in our community:

1. The average income of women who are the sole heads of families is $2,500. If the husband's income is $3,000 or less, 45 per cent of their wives work. Forty-two per cent of the unattached women in Canada have incomes of less than $1,500. The average income for women over 65 years is $1,500. For men of the same age it is $3,000.

2. Poverty is self-perpetuating. One in five in Canada lives in poverty, and the children who are brought up in poverty will never likely be able to escape this condition as things stand today.

3. Women who have a Grade 8 to 12 education and no special skills are severely limited in their job selection. These jobs are often in the direct service field, and are usually not any better than those at Sandringham Hospital. A woman's real choice is between these jobs and welfare. A nurse's aide working at Sandringham Hospital at present earns $240 per month. If the woman has three children or more to support, she will receive more than this from welfare (and yet still be living in poverty)! The woman most concerned with providing adequately for her children would choose welfare. Alternatively, women could upgrade or retrain and escape this dilemma. However, the vocational training programs that are available in Victoria, such as practical nurse, hairdresser, waitress, clerk and secretarial, do not pay well enough to support a family above the poverty level.

It is in the public interest that this strike be settled as soon as possible, primarily because of the 90 elderly and sick people who have been in jeopardy for almost a year as the innocent pawns of this dispute. The obvious solution is to refer this dispute to the Mediation Commission immediately.

Hopefully, some improved method could be devised other than strikes for women and others who work at jobs in essential direct services to people to gain better remuneration and working conditions. — Mrs. Dorothy Livingston, 1243 Oscar St.

60 Years Ago

From the Times of Sept. 10, 1911:

London — Hubert, one of the aviators of the aerial postal service inaugurated by the British post office last Saturday, met with a bad accident this morning, and only the mail bags which the flying postman carried from Hendon to Windsor Castle saved him from an almost certain death.

Hubert had just got away from Hendon with 120 pounds of mail when the machinery of his aeroplane went wrong and the machine crashed to the earth. The mail bags on top of him acted as a buffer and saved him from being crushed to death.

The CIA Plan To Take Over Latin America

By THAYER WALDO
San Francisco Chronicle

HELMS

ALLENDE

MEXICO CITY — The violent toppling of still another Bolivian regime is seen by knowledgeable sources here as part of a far-reaching movement, backed by the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency, to seize power in a total of six South American republics.

Although it has been officially denied, CIA money, training and advice was liberally given to the rebel strategists who masterminded overthrow of Bolivia's leftist President Juan Jose Torres.

Similar action is reportedly planned over the next 18 months in Peru, Argentina and Chile, probably in that order. In Uruguay and Colombia, it is felt that attempts will be made to achieve the goal through the ballot box, with force reserved as a last resort.

"Brain Trust"

Because the Bolivian political situation has been chronically chaotic throughout its history — the latest coup was number 187 in 146 years of independence — that republic was given top priority on the international planners' timetable.

The "brain trust" of this sweeping Latin American scheme includes four former presidents of the countries involved — all but one also ousted from office — prominent Catholic church leaders and conservative officers in the armed services' commands of each nation.

Their common aim is to prevent spread of Soviet and Communist Chinese penetration in that area, following a sharp decline of United States influence there over the past several years.

CIA collaboration was sought by Peru's ex-president, Fernando Belaunde Terry, with the consent of his colleagues in the movement. Although it remains to be clarified whether President Nixon was consulted personally, there can be no doubt that CIA Director Richard Helms got the green light at top administration level.

The plotters seek to establish centre-left, non-Communist regimes within the respective countries, relying chiefly on the leaders and programs of Social Democrat or Christian Democrat parties.

However, since they must also count on the aid of military men who are in many cases extreme political rightists, personally ambitious, or both, success in attaining those ends is at best uncertain.

The Bolivian developments offer a clear case in point. Former president Victor Paz Estenssoro of that landlocked Andean republic, a moderate Socialist, is a "brain trust" member; the main purpose of the revolt there was to let him return from seven years' exile in Lima and take over the presidency again.

But Colonel Hugo Banzer, backed by the fascist-oriented Bolivian Falange, had himself sworn in as chief executive before Paz could set foot on home soil.

Bitter Foes

During Paz's two periods in office, his Nationalist Revolutionary Movement (MNR) and the Falange were bitter foes. Although they joined forces to help topple Torres, a voluntary surrender of power by one to the other is now considered most unlikely.

Observers believe that similar frustrations are apt to crop up in at least three of the other target republics. It is regarded as most probable in Argentina, where the planners hope to put ex-president Arturo Frondizi back in office and keep former dictator Juan Peron out.

Uruguay and Colombia, however, represent the greatest risks, for prime reliance in both countries is to be placed on the electoral process.

The Uruguayan constitution forbids two consecutive presidential terms, but supporters of President Jorge Pacheco Areoco are pressing for an amendment which would let him run again in November — with the country's present "state of emergency" measures maintained during the balloting.

They reason that traditionally conservative farmers and cattlemen will join the business community in voting for Pacheco against Liber Sergegni, the fiery ex-general who wants to nationalize industry and banking. And police power under the emergency decree is expected to keep leftist demonstrators off the streets.

The gamble will be even greater in Colombia, where a 16-year "co-existence" pact between the republic's two major political parties runs out in 1974.

There the CIA has taken the initiative, insisting on support for independent leftist Alfonso Lopez Michelsen over the objections of many who wanted to back respected former president Alberto Lleras Camargo.

But the man to beat, everyone admits, is aging General Gustavo Rojas Pinilla, who ruled Colombia with an iron fist for 4½ years during the 1950s. Exiled, then tried and condemned for malfeasance in office, Rojas won a supreme court reversal of his conviction and made a stunning comeback, almost winning the presidency last year.

Last on List

The CIA view is that the ex-dictator must be defeated at all costs, and the CIA picked Lopez because he would let himself be put in office via a coup, if necessary, while Lleras would not.

Last but by no means least is Chile. The Marxist government of President Salvador Allende was voted into power, whereas the Bolivian, Peruvian and Argentine regimes are all de facto. For that reason, Chile is last on the plotters' schedule.

They believe that another year and a half of Allende's socialization program will have alienated enough Chileans to make his ouster from office both practical and popular.

$14 Million

Allende's immediate predecessor, Christian Democrat Eduardo Frei, would be the replacement. He, too, belongs to the international movement's "brain trust."

Well-informed sources report that the CIA has committed a $14 million fund to this six-nation project, with close to a million of it already spent in helping to finance the Bolivian rebels.

The Boy Scout Image Lost in Era of IBM

By NICHOLAS VON HOFFMAN
The Washington Post

NORTH BRUNSWICK, N.J. — From 1910 to the end of 1970, there have been a grand total of 49,628,049 boy scouts, cub scouts, explorers, den mothers and scout masters.

During the same time span the boys in the organization were the recipients of 45,465,788 merit badges signifying proficiency in everything from agriculture, American business, computers, landscape architecture to world brotherhood, zoology and unclassified.

This and much, much more information about the boy scouts is available at the organization's U.S. headquarters here. Much of it suggests patterns of activity far different from the impressions we may have formed from the bad jokes about good scouts helping those repetitiously enfeebled old ladies across the street.

Viewed en masse the boy scouts are quite unlike whatever it is you may think of when you see a mother with four or five little boys in cub scout uniforms at the shopping centre.

Because we don't see them together in their huge numbers — 4,682,658 boys and 1,604,626 attending adults — because they've been around so long we take them for granted, it doesn't occur to us that they are a highly centralized organization in program and an instrument for carrying out national social policies so that they play a role in America similar to that of Komsomol in Russia.

It's not just that Nixon is the scout's honorary president and that Johnson and Truman are honorary vice-presidents. It is that the connection is used, as when Nixon had the Boy Scouts of America begin Project SOAR, the letters of which stand for Save Our American Resources.

Project SOAR fits into the administration's approach to environmental problems; it is harmless, encouraging the cub packs and the scout troops to do such things as clean up vacant lots, plant window boxes and decorate up the ruins left by the strip-mining operations.

Not included is a program to encourage the boys to fan out and discover all the violations of the nation's massively unenforced anti-pollution laws and ordinances.

Thus millions of boys are taught to think about the problem in a prettily ameliorative way; they are taught not to think about it in a hard, analytical way or to inquire whether pollution and our continuing failure to do much with it arises from the forms and processes of our economic institutions.

The scouts are making a big black-inner city push. That figures. The word is that something must be done about the blacks even if they don't vote Republican. So the scouts are getting $700,000 from the department of labor to train poor folks as scouting "para-professionals."

If that surprises you because you've always thought of the scouts as a volunteer organization, you'd be interested in knowing that the scouts employ 4,700 full-time professionals plus uncounted others who work as secretaries, janitors, bookkeepers, etc.

All of this is consistent with the scouts' bland, blending mission to produce the American boy who is, as the scout law says, "trustworthy, helpful, reverent." This same American boy will also "understand the principles of the American social, economic and governmental systems," and be "knowledgeable about and take pride in his American heritage and understand America's role in the world."

Perhaps as a result of the ructions among the young portion of the population, the Scouts seem to be trying to make adjustments in their program and to expand and capture more boys for the organization.

There is a shift toward such things as "greater boy involvement in decision making" and "involvement of a boy in his own growth development," but the fact sheet that announced these changes also says "Kill the rumors! There will be no drastic tampering with the traditional structure of principles of the scout movement. There will be no changes in the scout oath and law, the salute, the sign, the motto or the slogan!"

Currently the scouts estimate that they are reaching about one out of every four boys, and this they adjudge to be too low. They want to go to one out of every three and for that purpose they have their Boypower Program, a stepped-up recruitment drive.

Boypower is, they point out, future manpower, so that its formation and channeling is of great importance to all kinds of powerful people. So it's not surprising that a lot of the organization's efforts go into guiding and advising people on careers and vocations. Whether we'd all agree on what is stressed and what is omitted in this area is questionable, but not its importance.

Its importance is also seen in the amount of money the scouts spend to run their programs . . . $91 million last year. The society makes sure that the scouts want not, even equipping them with four IBM computers, which make sure that the two and one-half million copies of Boys' Life get to their subscribers.

There is even a scout museum here with displays that move and talk and play music — a miniature Smithsonian with every sort of minor incunabula from the gold-plated 2-millionth outdoor cooking kit manufactured by the Regal Ware Company for scouts to the original Norman Rockwell scout paintings that decorated calendars before nude girls were permissible.

The scouts that the Rockwell illustrations bring to mind don't exist — the decentralized, voluntary family organization of fathers and sons, camping out or helping the neighborhood.

Maybe it was that way once but now these activities are carried out through a professional, centralized and corporate structure which functions as an instrument of national purpose and allows the organization to boast "44 out of the 57 astronauts have been in scouting as boys or leaders." Which may explain why the astronauts are such a bunch of straight-arrow bores.

The Swami From Miami

By ALEXANDRA HOUGH
Manchester Guardian

The portly Indian swami was sitting cross-legged in the sand, swathed in bright orange robes and holding forth to a respectful audience on the Wall Street Journal and the repercussions of the latest financial maneouvres.

I felt myself pan away upwards as if a film camera, getting the scene in perspective. The group was sitting in a circle on an island beach, taking in the words of their Great Master and surrounded by the Bahamian landscape of palm trees and washed-up orange-juice tins.

From a distance the unreality was just intensified. Ours was a special yoga retreat; unique in its attempts to go more than half way to meet Western culture.

Oriental philosophies are rapidly gaining ground among the young in America, but here was a blatant attempt to convert the other generations, even to the point of advertising.

Yogic quarters were set aquivering when hallowed whispers spread news of this betrayal. A far cry indeed from the Indian retreats, where the swami would sometimes hurl stones at would-be followers to prove their sincerity.

From the beginning, this incongruous mixture had to fail. In defiant isolation we took our places among our wealthy neighbours "to balance out their vibrations" as Swamiji said.

Periodically, he would take us on a formal expedition to the casino "to watch them suffer." I sometimes found their passionate pity for the rich a little suspect.

Before the holiday season and while staff outnumbered guests, all was beautiful vibes and purity of mind and loving thoughts. The atmosphere was euphoric.

Memories drift back of halcyon days spent in Fellini-orientated meanderings across the island, of warm nights swinging in a hammock on the beach, unable to shut one's eyes against the view by going to sleep; of long hypnotic swims into the horizon until one knew the rest of the world to be merely a distant flight of imagination.

Then the holiday season arrived, bringing with it a tide of very normal Americans. There is something about an institution that aims at selfless service and love of mankind that makes its failure that much more resounding.

Lured by advertisements in the Miami Herald, our guests arrived bright-eyed in anticipation of a relaxing holiday sunbathing and swimming and water skiing. The advertisements had not actually mentioned the compulsory 6 a.m. meditation, that "donations" were a minimum $15 a day, that the beans and rice twice daily needed to be supplemented to avoid protein deficiency, that those not attending the full daily regime were disciplined.

As more guests arrived, the staff retreated more into their own heads in order to insulate their spritual evolution from impure influences.

Their unfriendly welcome caused resentment which was reinforced by the generation gap. "Why should we be taught by a bunch of dirty hippies?" they muttered.

The young complained of illicit whisky parties and the old of marijuana smoke. A packet of meat was found in a bedroom, and immediately fed with much revulsion and ceremony to the stray beach dog. It became necessary to stick notices with peanut butter on to the larder door saying "This is Tomorrow's Dinner" and ultimately the kitchen door had to be locked.

Meditation changed from being a rarefied and intimate affair around a candle into an hour of shuffling and grunting and coughing and yawning and scratching and sniffing and sneezing.

Clashes of personality ricochetted from palm tree to palm treee, and a normal person was an unusual event.

There were those who would scream for blood after meals if their Yin and Yang had been upset by the addition of salt to the rice: the bean-sprouting addicts who lurked in the cellars day and night ministering to their beans; the middle-aged English lady who was a blush-making caricature of the English reputation abroad, not associating with the lower orders and salivating continuously over the retreat pet; and the German couple, who tried in vain to institute order into the general chaos, but succeeded only in raising yet more hackles.

And Swamiji. Perhaps it was because he was so pure that he succumbed so devastatingly to the poisoned atmosphere.

Anyone who has reached the top of his profession is allowed to be demanding and erratic as a reaction to worshipful followers, but the materialism against which he preached so fervently had turned round and corrupted him to the very core of his rotund and agile body.

He would fly to Miami to buy a $200 pet monkey or another motor boat, while we tried to explain to the guests why their food was below subsistence level. He bought a swimming pool and multi-coloured fountain, while we tried to find space for a vegetable garden.

He mortgaged his New York centre to buy a private plane, this being ordained by Divine Will. He denied the existence of his bank account, thus breaking the two yogic principles of honesty and poverty.

He was genuinely committed to the dissemination of yoga in America, yet floundering in the void between the two cultures. He succumbed to the pressures of Western materialism because he did not understand them in their context.

Mr. J.P. Johnson just pulled off the neatest business deal of his career.

That's right.
While you were watching television, J.P. was down the block horse tradin' his Chevron Touchdown cards. He's got his whole family buying Chevron gasolines with F-310* so he can have lots of cards for tradin'.

Matter of fact, he just traded a Jim Young for a Bob Howes and a Max Huber, plus a prize entry card.

This was important to J.P. because the prize card lets him get a chance on a trip around the world with Qantas. The T.V. can wait. Get with it. Renewed Weakness In Silver

LONDON (Reuter) — Silver showed renewed weakness today, as a rally in prices from four-year lows during mid-week trading faltered under fresh speculative liquidation.

Spot silver was set at 56.3 pence (about $1.41) a 1.4 pence fall, during the London bullion houses' regular daily fixing of the metal. A penny is worth about 2.5 cents.

Spot silver was fixed at 55.8 pence here last Wednesday, its lowest level since May, 1967, and a fall of more than five pence since the beginning of this month.

Bullion traders said the main influence on silver has been "tired liquidation" by speculators who moved into the metal this summer as a hedge as international currency disruption started to gather pace, resulting in the U.S. economic package of August which suspended the dollar's convertibility into gold and left many European currencies and the yen floating against the U.S. currency.

However, the failure of silver prices to appreciate as European currency markets remained relatively calm since then set off sharp selling, the dealers added.

Additionally, some of the long-term investment holdings in silver, taken up on expectations of an eventual rise in prices based on the shortfall between silver production and its consumption by the world's jewellery and industrial users, have been unloaded during the current selloff.

BUSINESS AND FINANCE

First City

First half results of First City Financial Corp. Ltd. produced net income of $263,294 (39 cents a share) on revenue of just over $3 million.

The company was formed a year ago as parent of City Savings and Trust Co., Edmonton, and Pacific Leasing Corp. Ltd., Vancouver.

Comparable figures for 1970 were considered not relevant because Pacific Leasing was included only for the last month of the period.

Digest

The Reader's Digest Association (canada) Ltd. reports net income for the year ended June 30 of $826,473 or 89.6 cents a share, up from $669,284 (72.6 cents) a year earlier.

Sales were down slightly to $19.4 million from $19.6 million but operating expenses were slashed to $17.7 million from $18.2 million.

Evans

All outstanding shares of $4 cumulative preferred convertible stock in Evans Products Co. was converted prior to Aug. 30 redemption date, the company reports.

The result was a further issue of 225,596 common shares for the 83,562 outstanding convertibles as of June 21 when the conversion date was set.

The issue originally was to finance the acquisition of 20 retail building supply stores operated in eastern U.S. by Moore's Super Stores Inc.

Volkswagen

Volkswagen chairman Kurt Lotz indicates the auto company's profit is declining at an accelerated rate.

Pofit so far this year is lower than in the same period last year and appears to be under great pressure now, Lotz said.

Volkswagen, West Germany's largest company, reported a profit of about $56 million in 1970, a decline of 42 per cent from 1969.

Increased costs, the float of the West German mark and the U.S. import surcharge, are depressing factors.

Wardair

Wardair Canada Ltd. reports a profit of $412,355 before taxes in the first seven months of 1971 compared with a loss of $574,900 in the corresponding period last year.

Maxwell W. Ward, president, said operating revenues increased 23.7 per cent and operating expenses 13.2 per cent.

While the company's international charter operations showed a profit in May, June and July, income in July dropped below July, 1970. This decrease was attributed to a lower yield from its Boeing 727.

Wardair doubled revenues for inclusive tours during the period and anticipates that package holiday tours will continue to show growth.

B of M

The Bank of Montreal reports balance of revenue of $67 million for the nine months ended July 31 compared with $74.55 million in the corresponding 1970 period.

This amounted to $1.96 a share compared with $2.18 in 1970.

G. Arnold Hart, chairman and chief executive officer, said for the quarter ended July 31 the balance of revenue was $22.9 million, 5.9, per cent higher.

Total revenue for the nine months was $505.9 million compared with $528.3 million in 1970; a decline of 4.2 per cent, while balance of profit was $32..2 million, down $2.8 million.

REGIONALISM 'REQUIRES CONSENSUS'

Regional government constantly requires public consensus, according to Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis, chairman of the Capital Region Board.

But, he told a public meeting in Langford Thursday evening, it is "tough to sort out the various pressure groups," and regional authority "should not allow itself to be manoeuvred into a position" where it is required to fill services of a purely local nature.

Curtis was part of a panel considering the question Is Regionalization Fulfilling a Need or Is It Another Tax Outlay.

The meeting, organized by the newly-formed Glancolme Chamber of Community Opinion, was attended by about 135 persons.

REVIEWS PROGRESS

Curtis reviewed progress made by the Capital Region District since its incorporation in 1966, outlining such regional projects already undertaken as sewer collection systems, parks acquisition and hospital planning and construction.

MLA Dr. G. Scott Wallace, (Ind. — Oak Bay) was also on the panel and criticized the selection of a site on Helmcken Road for a planned extended care hospital.

The site, he said, was unfortunately chosen because it is far from the main population centres.

"Extended care beds should be as accessible as possible," Wallace said, because they serve a very specific segment of sick people . . . people who depend to a very great extent on visitors.

ELDERLY

Most people in extended care facilities, he said, are elderly persons who can expect to finish their lives in hospital and as a result require visitors more than acute-care patients.

Wallace did defend the Helmcken Road site on one count, however. Projections indicate Victoria will require a third acute-care hospital in the next 15 years and plans presumably are to construct it at Helmcken Road.

Therefore, Wallace said, it makes good sense to purchase the property now.

CANOE RACES

The Victoria Canoe Club's third annual Gorge race meet begins Saturday, with three five-mile runs and two half-mile sprints.

The five-mile races are for junior men (under 18), ladies open and mixed.

The half-mile sprints are for one-person kayak and two-man canoes.

The canoe sprint is a novelty event the club calls a Centennial special. The combined age of the two paddlers in each canoe must be 100 years or more.

Sunday's event is a 10-mile men's open event with a half-mile portage.

Racing both days begins at 1:30 p.m. and contestants can register between noon and 1 p.m. each day at Craigflower Park. Entry fees are $2 for canoes and $1 for kayaks.

$74,800 Covers Extra Police Costs

An additional $74,800 was voted by Victoria council Thursday to cover unexpected costs of the city's police wage contract.

Council was told the money can be found in the city's contingency fund.

Earlier council had budgeted for a police pay increase of 15 per cent over two years, but the force was awarded wage hikes last month amounting to more than 18 per cent over 15 months.

The police commission has made cuts in its budget to soften the blow, dropping a new squad car, radio, and hiring of new personnel until the new year.

Other business completed by council:

● A telegram will be sent to U.S. President Richard Nixon opposing nuclear explosive tests on the Alaskan island of Amchitka.

● Council voted against a request by Shell Oil to install self-serve gasoline stations in the city on the grounds they may be a fire hazard.

● A pocket park formed by a vacant lot at the intersection of Pandora and Fort was named Scurrah Green after former mayor Percy Scurrah.

● Council voted to bring the Inner Harbor waterfront under provisions of the Municipal Act that allow a developer to avoid regular zoning restrictions in return for entering into a land use contract with the city, the latter to ensure final plans are strictly adhered to.

Dinghies in Regatta

Sailing 420-class dinghies, 30 crews from the Canadian armed forces and the Canadian Forces Sailing Association squadrons across Canada are competing in a regatta at Esquimalt this weekend.

This is the fourth such national regatta and CFB Esquimalt, was chosen to host the event because of B.C.'s centennial year. Previous regattas have been held in the east, the last two at Halifax, N.S.

The two-man crews began their first race today at 1 p.m. and the 12-race series will continue all day Saturday and Sunday, starting at 10 a.m.

Sailing enthusiasts can get a good view of the racing from Fort Rodd Hill.

Armed forces crews will be competing for the Admiral O'Brien Cup while association crews racing for the RCNSA Halifax Squadron Bowl.

Both trophies were won last year by Capt. Don Freudenberg and Lt.-Col. Barry Nelson, both of CFB North Bay, Ont.

A new prize has been added this year. The top squadron after the series will be presented with the CFSA National Sailing Trophy.

Rear-Admiral R. H. Leir, commander maritime command Pacific, will make the presentations Sunday at 6 p.m.

Park Subdivision Idea Haunting

The thought of subdividing part of Thetis Lake park for development may be in the mind of at least one Victoria alderman.

Ald Percy Frampton succeeded Thursday in preventing council from dedicating Thetis Lake Park as a park "in perpetuity."

"Frampton did not spell out his reasons, but did say he was personally not in favor of dedicating the 40 acres of the park that lie south of the Trans-Canada highway.

Council voted to refer the matter back to committee, with the exception of parks chairman Ald. Clyde Savage, who said it is "essential" to preserve the park.

TOO FAST

Savage said everyone knows that if this council does not dedicate the land as parkland forever, a new council may "subdivide" it.

Frampton said "I feel we are moving ahead too fast on this dedication." He said he was worried that if it is declared such a park, the regional government which is responsible for regional parks may never buy it from the city.

Aldermen have repeatedly refused to spend money to improve the park's facilities on the grounds that the park is outside city limits, used by people from all around the region, and should therefore be financed by the region.

Humor, Tragedy Tonight

At Langham Court Theatre tonight, the Peter Frisch adaptation of Edgar Lee Masters' Spoon River Anthology, will be given its first of four performances.

The numerous characters in the two-act arrangement are all former members of a community who speak of their lives and relationships and in so doing provide their own epitaphs.

In the process, humor, drama, poignancy, tragedy are explored.

The cast consists of advanced students of the New York Juilliard School who have been working in Victoria during the summer under the direction of Frisch and in the art of mime with Kaj Piesowocki at Open Space.

There will also be performances Saturday and on Sept. 17 and 18 at 8:15 p.m. at Langham Court.

Convicts Won't Yield Hostages

ATTICA, N.Y. (AP) — Prison officials made another unsuccessful attempt today to persuade convicts holding some 30 guards and employees hostage to end their rebellion despite a federal court order forbidding "physical reprisal" for Thursday's riot.

The court order was obtained by the prisoners early today.

Rebelling convicts remained peaceful since meeting late Thursday with the state corrections commissioner, but they continued to hold a group of guards and four employees hostage.

The four civilians are shop foremen who were trapped by the initial surge of prisoners, armed with pipes, baseball bats, home-made knives and stored tear-gas guns.

Oswald and other prison officials met again today with convicts and pledged to respect the federal injunction against retaliation. But they said they could not offer amnesty from criminal prosecution.

The order was announced by State Corrections Commissioner Russell Oswald, who said it was signed by Judge John T. Curtin of U.S. district court in Buffalo.

The convicts rioted Thursday, injuring 12 guards, seizing the hostages, and setting fire to three buildings.

Hundreds of prisoners spent the night in a prison yard, watched from a distance by state police, sheriff's deputies and corrections officers. All entrances to the yard were sealed off.

Prison officials said the hostages were apparently being treated well and had been provided with blankets. The night air was chilly.

The rioting convicts, 1,280 of the prison's 2,254, remained officially "out of control" early today.

Oswald flew in from Albany to hear the demands.

HOSTAGES SEEM OK

The hostages, kept at a distance in the large portions of the red-brick, grey-stone and "riot-proof" prison that the rebels controlled, apparently "are in reasonably good shape," a doctor who saw them reported.

The rioters—about half the Attica population—based their stand in Cellblock D, where the hostages provided security against any direct confrontation with the heavily armed lawmen. The hard core of the rebels was said to number only 500.

A measure of calm appeared to return to the then-surrounded prison Thursday afternoon when Oswald met in the prison yard with rebel leaders, a few hours after state police chased them from three of four cellblocks they initially seized.

Earlier in the day, at least 12 guards were beaten when the convicts grabbed control of four of the cellblocks. The bloodied guards were taken to hospitals with injuries that ranged from cuts and bruises to possible brain damage to William Quinn, 28.

Officials were not able to offer a cause for the sudden explosion of violence just before mid-morning visiting hours, except a report of a Wednesday night incident that resulted in injuries to both a guard and a prisoner.

State officials said the hostages were 31 guards and the four shop foremen.

Some of the injured guards were stripped of their clothing and sent wrapped in blankets to freedom and medical attention. Inside Cellblock D, other guards, their heads shrouded with pillow cases, were paraded past windows.

Demands issued by the convicts were wide-ranging, calling for more religious and political freedom, an end to censorship of newspapers and magazines and improved parole and rehabilitation practices. They also demanded pay at the state's minimum wage of $1.85 an hour for work in prison shops.

Rob Buyers, a Buffalo Evening News reporter inside the prison as a pool reporter, said some prisoners covered their faces with towels and shirts. Others wore football helmets with faceguards. A few carried clubs they apparently took from guards.

HEAVY FORCES SENT

As many as 500 state troopers were dispatched to the prison. They were bolstered by sheriff's deputies from five nearby counties.

At first, the heavily armed police force took a tough stand. They marched two by two into the 54-acre prison compound through tear gas, smoke and dying fires to wrest control of three cellblocks.

But a direct confrontation between the rioters and police never materialized as the troopers burst into cellblocks. In each case, the convicts had retreated with their captives, until they held only Cellblock D.

The assaults were called off in the hope of negotiations.

CANADA PLEDGES RADIATION CURBS

GENEVA (AP) — A team of Canadian scientists from government departments and industry pledged today to reduce still further the doses of radioactivity to which the public is exposed from nuclear power stations, even though they are already "well within the limits" currently enforced.

They told the fourth United Nations Atoms for Peace conference that although doses due to radioactive gases from the Douglas Point nuclear plant site on Lake Huron are well below the limits, a new system to delay the emissions from the Pickering nuclear generating station east of Toronto is being considered so as to permit further attenuation of short-lived radioactive particles.

The paper was presented by A. M. Marko, P. J. Barry and J. L. Weeks of Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd., together with Robert Wilson and Kam Wong of Ontario Hydro, and P. O. Perron of Hydro-Quebec.

STUDY HEAT EFFECTS

They said other measures being undertaken or planned to control radiation include:

1. Studies of the biological effects of the thermal plume at Pickering on plankton, fish and organisms living at the bottom of the lake;

2. Studies of the thermal effects of the Gentilly, Que., plant on the St. Lawrence River;

3. Improved methods for measuring contamination in the environment as well as for detecting, interpreting and assessing its effects;

4. Studies to assess the long-term build up of tritium in the Great Lakes.

Tritium, a heavy isotope of hydrogen with a mass three times that of ordinary hydrogen, is a radioactive pollutant which can escape from nuclear plants of the Canadian variety.

BILL WALKER

The Victoria Cougars are hinting, with an eye to the box office, that Victoria hockey fans are going to like what they see when the Western Canada Junior Hockey League swings into action next month.

Junior hockey, tier 1, is the glamor game of the west, believe it.

That was the gist of a casual get-together at the Imperial Inn this week. And if B.C. hockey fans thought last year's game was rough, wait until they see the rules that are used as yardsticks on the prairies, and in the east.

"They are two different games."

The author of the last quote was Mich Pechet, hockey player, Air Force officer, hotelman, and now managing director of the Cougars.

"I just know the fans will like it," he added.

But if Pechet is prejudiced, he has every right to be. Besides being a director of the Cougars, he's been following hockey nearly all his life, and is taking an active interest here in the club.

"The enthusiasm here has been great," he said of the club's advertising campaign.

"We have been pleasantly surprised by the number of season ticket inquiries," said Eric Bishop, who retains the rank of club manager. "It's surprised us, too," confirmed arena manager Jack Morgan. "We're running about 50-50 on new season ticket holders and renewals. Usually it's about 80 per cent renewals."

So, if the news is out that junior hockey is coming, and is about to be an instant success, then what about the club?

"Bodies," said Bishop, "we've got."

There will be about 120 in camp, and about 60 of those are from the city with an accompanying problem. Bishop isn't sure if he has tread on some toes by inviting some of the youngsters to practice with the Cougars, and wants it known that it is not his intention to flaunt any rules.

"I don't want static," he said. "We would just like to give the kids a chance to see if they can make it."

Coach Fred Hucul said he knew some of the players, and knew of some of the others. He didn't minimize his task, however, of starting out with a brand new club.

"It will be rough," he said. "But we'll give it a try — like we always have." The latter was in reference to a past association here with the Maple Leafs of the Western Hockey League. Fred was an all-star with the club, and one time was helping to pose the question: can a defenceman win the scoring title? This was before Bobby Orr, of course. But Fred made a run at it one fall, only to be overtaken by a batch of forwards just before Christmas.

There have been a few stops along the line since then for Fred, the last being at Kansas City last year under the aegis of the St. Louis Blues.

When that didn't pan out, Fred looked around, saw a spot open in Victoria, and decided that if the town had been good to him before, perhaps he could be good to it — and maybe in a few years, have a winner.

"It will take time," he emphasized. And Pechet echoed this sentiment. "We are on a three-year plan," he said.

And how many players would you say you had who could play in the league right now?, an eager interviewer asked.

"I would say nine," answered Hucul, "but I won't tell you which nine. Maybe someone else will show up better."

Bishop offered the opinion, obviously biased, that only Scotty Munro, owner-coach of the Calgary Stampeders, of the WCJHL hierarchy, had made good on his promise to give the Cougars some help.

"He did what he said he would."

"The others have been hedging," Bishop charged. Those weren't the actual words, but Bishop had made his point.

Otherwise, the soiree was confined to the usual details — schedules, exhibition games, high tea, and oh yes, three promises:

"We will try and give the city a hustling hockey club;

"We have some good prospects coming in;

"If we need help, we will do our utmost to get it."

Which all sounds great at a press conference.

But Hucul was quick to put everything in its proper light, lest anybody be misled.

"Right now, we are relying on other people's judgment," he said of the players coming to camp.

"But until we can define it ourselves, we won't know what we've got."

The players arrive Sunday. All 120 of them.

Charging Dodgers Squeeze by Padres

JIM PALMER
. . . gets No. 18

By The Associated Press

Baltimore's Jim Palmer pitched out of a tight seventh-inning jam, then went on to record a six-hitter for his 18th victory of the season with a 4-2 triumph over Washington Senators Thursday night.

In the only other two games on the American League schedule, California Angels edged Milwaukee Brewers 3-2 in 12 innings and Boston Red Sox erupted for seven eight-inning runs to wallop Detroit Tigers 12-6.

In the lone National League contest, Los Angeles Dodgers won their fourth straight game and ninth in 11 with a 3-2 squeaker over San Diego Padres.

The turning point for Palmer, a big right-hander who joined team-mate Dave McNally as an 18-game winner—and Mike Cuellar of the Orioles tries to join them tonight—came after Tom McCraw of the Senators led off the seventh with a home run.

A walk, a single and a wild pitch put two runners in scoring position with one out and brought up the potential tying run, big Frank Howard.

USES CURVES

"With Palmer, I always have to look for fast balls," Howard recalled. "So he puts three curves over, right where he wants 'em.

"It was just a case of 'take a hike.' I couldn't have hit those hooks with two bats That was the game right there."

Actually it wasn't right right at that moment. It was a few minutes later, though, when Paleemer also caught pinch-hitter Jeff Burroughs looking, also with a curve.

Palmer also scored a run for the Birds, singling to lead off the third ining and later coming in on Boog Powell's sacrifice fly.

In the sixth, Frank Robinson crashed the 22nd home run of the year and 497th of his career. Two outs later, Dave Johnson put his 16th homer over the wall.

TIE IT IN NINTH

The Angels, held hitless for seven innings by rookie Bill Parsons, tied the Brewers in the bottom of the ninth on a pair of walks and Mickey Rivers' triple.

And when rookie Floyd Weaver took over for Parsons in the 12th, Billy Parker ended it with a two-out homer, his first, over the centre-field fence.

Luis Aparicio drove in five runs for the Red Sox with three singles and his fourth home run of the year and Billy Conigliaro also homered for the winners while Dalton Jones had one for the Tigers.

Richie Allen's game-tying double triggered the Dodgers' three-run rally in the sixth inning against the Padres that gave Al Downing his 18th victory and boosted Los Angeles within 4½ games of idle San Francisco in the National League West.

ESKIMO HOPEFUL

EDMONTON (CP) — Chip Kell, an offensive guard and centre from San Diego Chargers, has come to Edmonton for a five-day trial with the Eskimos of the Western Football Conference.

Howe Gets Post With Executive

DETROIT (AP) — "The game sells itself — whether there is a No. 9 or No. 6," Gordie Howe said somewhat unconvincingly. "The tickets will be sold whether I'm there or not."

But whether Olympia Stadium is filled for every Detroit Red Wings game or not, the place will never be the same. No. 9 is gone. Howe has retired.

His retirement was formally announced Thursday, although Howe said publicly Wednesday that he was retiring after 25 years in the National Hockey League — all with Detroit.

Team owner and president Bruce Norris said "welcome to our problems" and named the 43-year-old Howe a vice-president in the organization, a job which Howe said "is based on a lifetime agreement."

"I've got it as long as I want."

He had a year left on a three-year, $100,000-a-year-contract. That year "is kicked out the window," he said, adding that now he will be working for "considerably less."

More than 300 persons jammed the Olympia Room lounge for the official announcement at a luncheon. At the head table with Howe and his wife, Colleen, were Norris, Clarence Campbell, president of the NHL, Ned Harkness, Wings general-manager, coach Doug Barkley and several other special guests.

It was difficult to tell whether tears were welling up in Campbell's eyes or they were glistening because of the television lights. He could not hide his gloom and undoubtedly echoed the sentiments of millions of hockey fans when he said:

"Inevitably it will be treated as a sad day. It is a sad day.

"Never in the history of hockey has there been such an obvious and dramatic loss . . . Hockey can never repay its debt of gratitude to Gordie Howe."

HOCKEY ROUNDUP

New Pro League Threat to NHL?

(Times News Services)

The Edmonton Journal says it has learned that a "newly-formed major professional hockey league is eyeing Edmonton, Calgary and Winnipeg as possible franchises."

The newspaper said the league, known as the World Hockey Association, is the brainchild of Los Angeles lawyer Gary L. Davidson and his partner, Denis Murphy.

Winnipeg businessman Ben Hatskin admitted he had been approached about a franchise but refused further comment.

Bill Hunter, majority shareholder of Edmonton Oil Kings, also refused to comment on a report he had been approached. It is known that Hunter was in Los Angeles during the weekend.

The promotors list Quebec City and Ottawa as well as Edmonton, Calgary and Winnipeg as prospects.

President Clarence Campbell of the National Hockey League, when questioned about the new circuit, dismissed it lightly, the Journal said.

The newspaper said that when Davidson was questioned whether he was prepared to raid NHL players, Davidson said:

"Our league will open a new era of negotiation with NHL players."

Elsewhere in hockey . . .

Chicago Black Hawks gave up three players Thursday to get goaltender Gary Smith from California Golden Seals. In exchange for Smith, the Hawks sent goalie Gerry Desjardins, forward Gerry Pinder and forward Kerry Bond, a 19-goal scorer with Denver Spurs of the Western League last season.

Philadelphia Flyers have signed holdover centre Bobby Clarke and rookie Larry Wright, a 20-year-old Regina Pat graduate who was the NHL club's first draft choice.

Pittsburgh Penguins also got in the signing act by getting completed contracts from goalie Roy Edwards, defenceman Dave Burrows and centre Rene Robert. Both Burrows and Robert were picked up in hockey's intra-league draft.

Bill Goldsworthy signed his 1971-71 contract, and said he has written a book that will make him a better player for Minnesota North Stars.

"I have to get one good start this season," Goldsworthy said. "Or my book won't sell."

Goldsworthy started slowly last year but came on to finish with 34 goals and 31 assists for 65 points, second high on the team. The 27-year-old right winger figures his book, The Goldy Shuffle, will make him hustle that much harder after it is released in October.

NON-RESIDENT ANGLERS TO PAY BOAT LICENCES

Non-resident sports fishermen in British Columbia tidal waters will have to get special boat licences ranging as high as $75 next year.

The scheme, proposed a year ago, was announced Thursday by the Federal Fisheries Department's Pacific region office in Vancouver.

In addition to licences for privately-owned tourist boats, U.S. charter or rental vessels will have to obtain regular commercial fishing licences, ranging from $100 to $400, depending on the size of the boat.

Canadian charter or rental vessels are not affected.

The department said proceeds of the licence scheme will go into a fund to build Coho and Spring salmon hatcheries. It is expected $400,000 will be collected in the first year of operation.

Private non-resident boats under 15 feet will pay $15. Boats 15 to 29 feet will pay $25, those 30 to 39 feet will pay $50 and those 40 feet and over $75.

Salmonbellies Retain Honors

COQUITLAM (CP) — New Westminster Salmonbellies earned a berth in the Canadian senior lacrosse final for the Mann Cup Thursday night, defeated Coquitlam Adanacs, 12-11, in overtime.

It was the fourth Western Lacrosse Association final meeting in a row for the two teams and New Westminster has won them all.

The Salmonbellies took this series four games to two. They now travel to Brantford, to meet the Warriors in the best-of-seven championship beginning Monday.

Ken Winzoski was the hero for New Westminster, scoring the winning goal at 9:41 of the 10-minute overtime period.

Ed Goss led the Salmonbellies' attack with two goals and three assists and was named most valuable player of the series.

New Westminster built a 5-1 first-period lead, but Coquitlam stormed back to tie the game at 7-7 heading into the final 20 minutes.

Coquitlam was ahead 9-7 midway through the final period, but the Salmonbellies scored three unanswered goals before Gates scored to force the game into overtime.

Van de Water Aims To Scuttle Pollards

Chris Van de Water will be out to break up a father-son domination in the stock car section of a car-racing program Saturday at Western Speedway.

Van de Water is currently running a close second to Larry Pollard in the stock car driver standings while Larry's father, Earl, is running third.

Larry Pollard has 1,291 points, Van de Water has racked up 1,262 and Earl has accumulated 1,237.

A sweep of the night's events could mean first place for any one of the trio.

Rick O'Dell, who scored his fifth straight win in the Billy Foster 100 open super-stock event on Monday will be seeking to further that streak while returning to regular competition in the other half of the Saturday program.

O'Dell now leads runner-up Terry Forsyth 1,241-808 in the points race.

Time trials begin at 7 p.m. with racing at 8.

Miller's 65 Best; Vollmer Fires 68

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — John Miller holed a 50-foot eagle putt on the 18th hole Thursday and took the first round lead in the $100,000 Southern Open golf tournament.

The young Californian's 65 gave him a two-stroke edge over Homero Blancas, Caesar Senude and Mike Reasor.

The par-70 Green Island County Country Club course is 6685 yards of pure putting meanness. Only 21 players managed to beat par on what would normally be considered a short golf course.

Thirteen more were at even par, including defending champion Mason Rudolph, whose only tour victory since 1965 was in this tournament last year.

Seven players finished the day at 68, two under par. They were Wayne Vollmer of Vancouver, former Master champion Gay Brewer, Frank Beard, Jack Ewing, Fred Marti, and Pete Brown.

GROUP AT 69

Hometown favorite Hugh Royer and another former Masters champion, George Archer, led the group at 69. Archer has been considered a strong contender, and earlier this week won the Greater Hartford Open in a three-way sudden death showdown. Tied with Royer and Archer were Dan Sikes, Steve Opperman, Harry Toscano, Doug Olson, Gibby Gilbert, Lou Garham, Ken Ellsworth and Divid Lee.

Miller, who never putted Southern-style Bermuda grass until he turned pro two years ago, finished this year's Masters tied for second one shot off Charles Coody's winning pace.

Wilf Homenuik of Winnipeg shot a 72 and George Knudson of Toronto had a 74.

Thompson Harvests Island Golf Crown

NANAIMO — Victoria's Bill Thompson fired an 82 Thursday to win the Vancouver Island Seniors Golf Association annual championship at the Nanaimo Golf and Country Club.

Thompson edged A. M. Chester of Nanaimo by one stroke in the 18-hole medal-play tournament.

The tourney, which was rained out June 24, attracted 120 golfers, 45 of which were B.C. Seniors from Vancouver.

Low net honors went to Jim Crawford of Mt. Brenton with a score of 68, while Orville Jackson of Nanaimo followed with a 70.

Royal Colwood's Dave Parker shot a low gross of 84 to top the section for players with handicaps below four and 12. Pete McIntyre of Victoria was low net with a 74.

Other handicap winners were Roy Dunn of Nanaimo; Biff Ingram of Courtenay; J. R. Cooper, Fred Perkins, and J. A. Merill, all of Vancouver; and Ken King of Glen Meadows.

Vancouver Island seniors shot a total of 713 for the best 10 net scores to retain the Tom Heathfield Cup. B.C. Seniors from Vancouver shot 764.

WOMEN'S HURDLES . . . AT UVIC

It's a Whole New Race

Victoria's Connie Halbert is favored to win a new race — the women's 400-metre hurdles — when the University of Victoria hosts its all-comers' track and field meet Saturday at Centennial Stadium.

The race, which has only been run once this season, in West Germany, is being staged as part of a series of world-wide experiments with the objective of establishing an ideal international hurdles distance for women to replace the 200-metre hurdles which was recently discontinued.

Miss Halbert specializes in the half-mile run at Uvic.

Meanwhile, athletes from throughout British Columbia are expected to cpmpete in the all-comers' meet, which starts at 10 a.m. Saturday. The event is open to all categories of club and high school athletes whether or not they are registered with the Canadian Track and Field Federation.

The meet is being held as a warm-up for the Vancouver Island track and field championships, slated for Sept. 18 and 19. The Island championships, which wind up local track and field activities, were originally scheduled for Labor Day, then Sept. 26, before officials agreed on the Sept. 18-19 dates. The meet opens at Centennial Stadium and continues on the 19th in Duncan.

Blacker the Fish — Better the Day for Fishing

STEWART LANG Reports on The Outdoors

It is difficult to imagine, before signing on the proverbial dotted line, what freedom and ease of movement an outdoorsman owning a four-wheel-drive vehicle can enjoy.

The principle feature of the "four-by-four" is an uncanny ability to carry the naturalist, camper, photographer, hunter or hiker, as well as his gear, far beyond the crowded webs of asphalt required by the conventional breed of truck.

And in terms of load-carrying ability and mobility, 4wd vehicles are unbeatable. Trail bikes and dune buggies may get as far or further into the boondocks, but their load-carrying capacities are limited.

Conventional trucks can carry the same loads, but are limited to less rugged terrain.

Surprise is the general reaction of someone riding in or driving a four-by-four for the first time. It is hard to foresee the difference an extra set of driving wheels can make when it comes to mud-slogging or hill-climbing ability.

A supply of power to all four tires, together with a two-speed transfer case to give an extra "low" set of gears, can carry the 4wd through amazing depths of mud, snow or water.

But to the unprepared novice driver, this seemingly unstoppable mobility can present a danger — there will come a point, while testing the limitations of his new acquisition, that he can no longer go forward or backwards.

This is known as stuck, in capital letters.

And anybody who has not been stuck in a 4wd hasn't really lived yet.

For this reason, we recommend carrying some means of extracting your vehicle from whatever fate has befallen it — either a power-operated winch attached to the truck frame or one of the ingenious hand-operated devices now on the market for this or related purposes.

Other items which should be carried with the 4wd at all times include food, matches, axe and/or saw, shovel, tire chains and repair kit as well as spare cable or rope.

And above all, either let someone know your destination or travel with another rig.

Along with its strictly utilitarian use in the woods, we found that our own short-wheelbase vehicle possesses certain advantages in the city. The short turning circle and easy visibility make parking a snap and other drivers tend to give a 4wd vehicle a little more leeway — perhaps a little intimidated by the quarter-inch-thick steel bumper.

In addition, we must confess to a certain amount of relief while facing the time when Old Man Winter clamps his snowy fist on our city streets.

No more worries about chains or digging oneself out of drifts — just a simple shift of the four-wheel-drive lever and all is well.

Theoretically, at least.

POT SHOTS: Golden Arrow Club of Ladysmith captured the club trophy during last week's B.C. Archery Association bowhunt in the Nimpkish Valley area . . . Dennis Quist of Ladysmith captured a trophy for the largest buck (a three-pointer) while clubmate Norm Evans shared a trophy for the most grouse with Charley Hannaford of the Metchosin Bowmen after bagging three each . . . Bill Howe of Sidney captured a trophy for the smallest buck . . . Mark Albany of the Songhees reserve won a trophy for non-members of the BCAA organization . . . Rev. Harry Sylvester, president of the Metchosin Bowmen, managed to bag just one grouse while Doug Wood, Island representative for the BCAA, managed only to look at a rare albino spike.

Wood reports that the ratio of bucks to does in the flatland areas of the Nimpkish Valley is one to three while in the timber it changes to three to two.

Am afraid we got skunked on the opening day of the grouse season . . . in the same location we bagged some last year . . . others who have hunted the same region off the Malahat for years with good success reported that they hadn't even seen a solitary bird.

Upstart Czech Joins Ashe, Okker in Semis

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP) — Third-seeded Arthur Ashe of the United States, fourth-seeded Tom Okker of the Netherlands and dark horse Jan Kodes of Czechoslovakia reached the semi-finals of the men's singles in the United States Open tennis championships Thursday.

The U.S. is assured of another semi-final berth when second-seeded Stan Smith and the greatly-improved contract professional, Marty Riessen, meet in a delayed quarter-final today.

Both the men's and women's finals are scheduled for Sunday, with $20,000 going to the male winner and $6,600 to the woman champion.

Ashe, his high-bounding service and put-away volley in top form, crushed Manuel Orantes of Spain, 6-1, 6-2, 7-6.

Okker, runner-up to Ashe in the inaugural Open here in 1968, was too fast for seventh-seeded Clark Graebner of New York, winning 6-2, 6-3, 6-4.

On Saturday, Okker will play the winner of the Smith-Riessen match while Ashe takes his bullet serves against Kodes, the tournament giant-killer.

The Czech clay-court specialist, who says he plays on grass only twice a year, continued his surprising sweep by stunning Frank Froehling of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., 6-0, 7-6, 6-3.

Riessen reached the quarter-finals belatedly, beating Nicki Pilic of Yugoslavia, 7-5, 7-6, 7-6, in a match halted by darkness Wednesday with the score at 4-4 in the second set.

Centre of attraction today will be the return to the centre court of 16-year-old Chris Evert of Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

Ryder Cup Matches Threatened

ST. LOUIS (Reuter) — Members of Irish-American groups in the St. Louis area have threatened to disrupt the forthcoming Ryder Cup golf tournament here unless British troops are withdrawn from "the homes and streets of Northern Ireland."

An "ultimatum" was received Wednesday by S. C. (Tony) Stout, British consul-general in St. Louis, and Jack Berkley, director of the British-American international tournament which is due to open Thursday next week in Ladue, a wealthy St. Louis suburb.

Milwaukee Bids For NHL Berth

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Milwaukee Bucks' president Ray Patterson said Thursday the corporate arm of the National Basketball Association champions has applied for an expansion franchise in the National Hockey League.

The NHL is expected to expand in two years, Patterson said, and the bid by Milwaukee Professional Sports and Services Inc. was made in light of brightened prospects for a new sports development at State Fair Park or expanded seating capacity at the existing 10,746-seat arena.

"We have the management, the capital and the desire," Patterson said. "Applying for a major league hockey franchise is consistent with our concept of continual growth in the professional sports and communications fields."

The proposed development at the fairgrounds would seat 15,500 for hockey, 500 more than the minimum required by the NHL for arenas in member cities. That proposal currently is before the state legislature.

Sam Pollock, president of Montreal Canadiens, said in May that Milwaukee would be first and Denver second on his list of preferences for expansion franchises.

He cited Milwaukee's northern climate, where hockey is popular and its potential for natural rivalry with such existing NHL cities as Minnesota, Chicago and Detroit.

Strike Scares Title-Bidders

The strike of American longshoremen on the west coast may have wrung most of the international flavor out of the World Star Class championships starting Saturday in Puget Sound.

Few sailors can afford to pay a $6,752 bill to fly their boat from Europe to Seattle and only a handful have risked spending a sixth that amount to have their boats taken to the crowded port of Vancouver on the chance they will be unloaded in time.

This year's championships, which have attracted 48 entries from 12 states and six other countries, could well be won by one of two west coast sailors.

Sailmaker Lowell North of San Diego is a prime favorite, being a three-time world champion. He returned home Sunday after competing in Olympic class racing in Germany.

Veteran Swiftsure competitor Bill Buchan of the Corinthian Yacht Club could also end up wearing the championship laurels again.

He won last year's series, raced in Sweden and first became a Star world champion in 1961 when the series were held in San Diego.

Add to these feats, that 20 of this year's fleet of boats have been built by him at his Mercer Island home and that the Puget Sound area is his home territory — its light winds and unpredictable tides well known to him — and you have what sounds like an unbeatable combination.

Also not to be written off lightly is Evan Bailey of San Francisco who edged out Buchan in the invitational Star regatta that ended in Vancouver Monday.

Bailey had only one first in the five-race series but Buchan was toppled when he came 15th in the third race, losing too many points in spite of three first-places.

Three of Britain's top dinghy sailors will be in Victoria next week as part of a provincial tour, jointly sponsored by the Canadian Yachting Association and the B.C. Yachting Association.

The visiting trio are Keith Musto, Flying Dutchman world champion who heads a British sailmaking company; Peter Bateman, Fireball world champion, and Peter Milne, designer of the Fireball and one-time editor of Yachts and Yachting.

Musto will be on hand at the Royal Victoria Yacht Club Monday at 8 p.m. for an informal discussion on dinghy sailing and racing tactics.

All three will be at the club at 8 p.m. Tuesday for a symposium, which is expected to draw enthusiasts from other local and up-Island clubs. There will be a charge of $1 for adults and 50 cents for children in order to help defray the costs of the tour.

B C Y A president Dick Sharpe has just returned from Kingston, Ont. where he was able to judge first-hand the sailing prowess that keeps Bateman at the top.

He tells of one race he saw in which Bateman beat out 92 other boats in the Fireball class.

"He sailed through the rest of the fleet as if they were standing still and when he went over the finish line he was ahead of every boat in the class ahead of them that had started 10 minutes before!".

It will be a double-header Sunday when local boats sail a 15-mile course off the Victoria waterfront competing in two races at the same time — the Thermopylae Trophy Race and the Centennial Race, which had to be scrubbed when it was originally scheduled June 6 for lack of wind.

★ ★ ★ 8

A minimum entry of eight boats has been set for each of the five divisions with the first start gun set to be fired off the Clover Point-Ross Bay area at 10 a.m.

The Thermopylae Club's trophy will go to the winner of the IOR division and the Greater Victoria Centennial Committee will present trophies to the IOR winner and each of the other four classes. They are PHRF boats rated 3.9 and over, PHRF boats rated 4.0 and over, Thunderbirds and Cal 20s.

Registration forms and race instructions are available at the Royal Vic., the Esquimalt Squadron of the Canadian Forces Sailing Association at Munro Head and the Turkey Head Sailing Association's base at Oak Bay Marina.

Registrations will be taken at Royal Vic. tonight from 8 to 10 p.m. and Saturday from 1 to 5 p.m.

The course has been arranged so that shore-watchers will be able to have a ringside seat of the competing armada.

Basketball Gets Ready For Season

Victoria and District Amateur Basketball Association will plan for the coming campaign with a pre-season meeting Monday at 8 p.m. in the Ingraham Hotel.

All coaches, managers and interested parents are invited to attend.

Officers returning to guide the VDABA are John Marshall, president; Ray MacManaman, treasurer; Verna Mosher, registrar; Bob McAra, statistician; Bob Bird, promotion; Monty Mosher, vice-president, and Barb Hallberg, treasurer.

Other directors are Ann McKeachie, Bob Tomlinson, Tom Doyle, Gloria Mosser, Edna Foresman, Mac McKeracher and Les Godfrey.

Registrations for boys and girls from 10 to 15 years of age will be held from 7 to 9 p.m. Sept. 16 and 17 in the S. J. Willis Junior High School auditorium.

Prospective players are required to bring parent or guardian, their birth certificate and the $7 registration fee

League play will begin in October and end in March.

Before the Judge

A man who cashed $763 in worthless cheques and often got cash refunds when he returned items purchased with the proceeds to stores, pleaded guilty to 19 charges of uttering Thursday.

The charges resulted from a cheque-writing spree July 30 and Aug. 2 in Victoria, Saanich, Oak Bay and outlying areas.

A police officer told the court that David E. Cooper, 24, address unknown, opened accounts at two banks with the identification of another person. He then deposited money in each account when opening them but withdrew the funds the same day.

Cooper also pleaded guilty to attempting to utter a $40 cheque Aug. 2 at the Canada Safeway Store, 2635 Quadra.

Court was told that Cooper purchased groceries, clothing, stereo equipment and electrical appliances with the cheques, often receiving cash refunds when he brought the items back to the stores.

Judge William Ostler remanded Cooper to Sept. 13 for sentence.

Prosecutor John Macintyre said the accused had a record including false pretences, breaking, entering and theft and possession of stolen property.

Daniel O'Donahue, 40, of 1039 Esquimalt, was sentenced to a year in prison when he pleaded guilty to two counts of car theft.

Court was told that the accused rented cars from two rental agencies in the city, put down a cash deposit and abandoned the vehicles instead of returning them to the companies.

An officer testified that O'Donahue rented a car from Penny's Rent a Car, 767 Douglas, Aug. 27 promising to return it two days later after he left a $50 deposit.

The accused abandoned the car, the policeman said, in Esquimalt Sept. 1.

O'Donahue rented the second vehicle from Budget Rent-a-Car Victoria Ltd., 843 Douglas, Sept. 2 and was to return it three days later. He left a $60 deposit.

The policeman said O'Donahue drove the car up-Island and took it to Vancouver where he left it Sept. 7.

"I just went broke. I had no intentions of doing what I did," O'Donahue told Ostler.

He said he had a job with the department of national defence and was laid off for a couple of days. He said he was to report back to work Sept. 7.

The accused said he had been drinking when he committed the offences.

Macintyre said O'Donahue's record stretched back to 1946 and included convictions for forgery, uttering, possession of stolen property, fraud, robbery and attempted escape.

Ernest W. Davis, 61, of 117 Superior, was fined a total of $500 when he pleaded guilty to driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08 per cent and failing to remain at the scene of an accident.

Court was told that Davis hit a parked car with his truck on Superior about 11:15 p.m. Sept. 8 and drove away.

A three-year-old boy in the truck suffered facial cuts in the collision and was taken to hospital.

Davis told Ostler that he drove away because the youngster was bleeding and was excited and crying.

"I wanted to clean him up and take him to hospital and turn myself in," he said.

Ian F. Brighton, 32, of 425 Raynor, was fined $300 when he pleaded guilty to obstructing a police officer.

Court was told he drove his car away from where he was stopped by police at Fernwood and Grant, knocking an officer aside.

He refused to get out of his car when stopped about 1:45 a.m. Thursday and locked all the doors.

A policeman said Brighton told officers they needed a search warrant. The officers, the policeman said, smelled liquor coming from the car when they were looking at registration and insurance papers.

The officers found a hypodermic needle, a teaspoon and mixture of what the officer said was MD and speed when the car was searched on Stanley Street where it was stopped the second time.

Ostler said no search warrant was necessary because the police had reason to believe there was liquor in the car.

The judge said police "had a perfect right" to search the car and this was provided in both the liquor and narcotic acts.

Kenneth Appleton, 62, of 1420 Beach Drive, was fined $200 in traffic court by Judge E. F. N. Robinson for refusing to give a sample of his breath when requested to do so by police. His licence was suspended for two months except when working.

Garry William Tyler, 21, of 2821 Irma, was fined $300 for impaired driving and prohibited from driving for three months except when working.

Patrick Robert Fisher, 21, of 3098 Paisley Place, was fined $300 for impaired driving and prohibited from driving for three months except when working.

Sylvan R. Baker, 34, of 2786 Spencer Road, was fined $150 for refusing to give a sample of his breath when requested to do so by police.

PM, RCMP PROBING INTIMIDATION CHARGE

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Charges were made in the Commons Thursday that non-communist members of the Chinese community in Vancouver are being threatened with acts of intimidation and coercion unless they fall in with the demands of the Peking regime.

Prime minister Trudeau told the House that his office and the RCMP are attempting to determine the validity of the charges, and an investigation is under way.

"As yet, we have no evidence that these allegations are well founded, but we are still looking into the matter," the prime minister said.

Tax Relief Plan To Be Scrutinized

Mayor Courtney Haddock's tax relief plan for senior citizens may get a close examination at next week's convention of municipal leaders in Victoria.

The plan fell short of getting council approval Thursday when it was tabled at the suggestion of Ald. Peter Pollen.

Pollen made the move because he said the subject of property tax relief would be thoroughly discussed at the convention of the Union of B.C. Municipalities. Debate on a resolution calling for such relief is a perennial occurence at the UBCM talks.

Haddock's plan offers homeowners 65 or over the option of deferring payment of increases in property taxes until their homes are sold, before or after death. Taxes would then be assessed on sale of the home, with interest at 8 per cent, although some changes in the mayor's plan have been hinted.

Pollen said early acceptance of the Mayor's plan "might prejudice our position" as participants at the convention.

An indication that the plan might be opposed at the convention came when Mayor Hugh Curtis of Saanich said Saturday it remains a "fuzzy proposal" which should be initiated on a province-wide basis by the provincial government.

No one on Victoria council has opposed Haddock's plan, though several detail changes have been suggested.

Ald. Harold Olafson and Tom Christie voted against tabling the proposal, but did not give reasons.

Realtor Loses Again

Victoria council voted solidly Thursday against rezoning a plot of land on Ivy Place for apartment use.

It was the third time council had turned down an application by Victoria realtor J. W. Dickie for a rezoning of the property.

Ivy intersects Cedar Hill Road a block south of Hillside.

Council heard testimony from seven people opposing the scheme, and was given a petition bearing 290 names.

Speaking for the project, lawyer Allan Cox said the fact that the controversial proposal should not deter council from accepting it.

Cox noted Dickie's apartment proposal had support from the city planning department and the Victoria Advisory Planning Commission.

'FAMILY AREA'

Neil Main, 2702 Rosebury, drew cheers and applause from the gallery when he said "this is a family area and we want to keep it a family area."

Main said there was no reason to spot zone a stable community when apartment-zoned property lies undeveloped.

He suggested the Dickie development was merely "profits manipulated to the detriment of many people."

Another area resident, Dick Coles of 1430 Ryan, said the properties owned by Dickie had deteriorated since being bought by him. He said the developer was either "deliberately" trying to let the property deteriorate or he was "incapable of administering rented premises.

Family Turned In

OGDEN, Utah (AP) — Five children aged 11 through 13 were arrested after a father of four of them turned them in for taking $186 in toys in a store burglary, police said Wednesday. The fifth youth was a cousin of the four, officers said. Names were not disclosed.

Buddhist Fight Low-Key

SAIGON (NYT) — In the growing wave of criticism directed against President Nguyen Van Thieu, who will be the only candidate in the controversial presidential election next month, some of the sharpest and most scornful attacks come from the leaders of the An Quang Pagoda. While the Buddhist venerables keep their voices low, their followers hear them clearly.

The largest and most influential faction of the Buddhist church, the An Quang embraces a majority of the nation's 17 million people. It has become a symbol for disapproval of successive Saigon governments and for protests.

LITTLE FAITH

The apparent winning of 28 out of 159 seats in the lower house elections last week by An Quang-supported candidates is not considered a watershed victory. For one thing, An Quang leaders have little faith in the ability of the legislature to seriously hurt or challenge Thieu. They supported more than twice the number of candidates who won seats but the most urgent campaigning appears to have been done by monks at the local levels.

A wildly diverse group, the An Quang-backed candidates included high-ranking army officers, who could not normally be expected to share the Buddhists' antiwar stand, and Catholic politicians hoping to be re-elected. The common denominator was their opposition to the government.

NOT HAPPY OR SAD

In the An Quang Pagoda — a large, rather ugly building in Cholon, the Chinese section of the city — the venerable Thien Hoa said the church was neither "happy or sad" about its gains in the election, which give them treble the number of seats they have had.

He is the head of the Vien Hoa Dao, or Institute for the Propagation of the Dharma. It is considered the administrative and political arm of the An Quang.

But Thien Hoa denied — as other An Quang leaders tend to — that the An Quang fuses politics and religion.

"The Buddhist church does not participate in politics" he said, in Vietnamese. "The church did not take part in the lower house elections but Buddhism — which has always tried to save the nation and the people in times of danger — appealed to the people to elect good men."

OWN VIEW

When asked what the An Quang expected of the new deputies — for the Buddhist leaders carefully watch how their proteges vote on crucial issues — Thien Hoa answered:

"Every one has his own point of view. That is their right. I can say in general, however, that we expect the government to be against Nixon's policies. They should want to build a truly sovereign nation, a democratic nation."

This is exactly what the An Quang leaders feel they do not have. For years, they have urged an end to the war and a political settlement, not a military solution. They have felt that the U.S. presence in South Vietnam has both damaged and weakened the country and the people by, among other actions, supporting governments that have evoked the Buddhist's disapproval.

CRUCIAL ROLE

The Buddhists played a crucial role in 1963 in overthrowing President Ngo Dinh Diem. Their ability to arouse and mobilize the nation has not been forgotten. In that turbulent year the Buddhists reacted against what they saw as intense religious persecution.

The venerables do not feel that riots are a measure of the value of their church. They do not wish to raise their voices and flex their muscles except when they feel directly menaced.

Business Crippled

WINNIPEG (CP) — Continental Insurance Co. will lay off about 40 employees at its Winnipeg office within the next two months because of anticipated loss of business to the Manitoba Public Insurance Corp.

Continental's Winnipeg manager, Frank T. Eastwood, said the lay-offs will affect about half the company's employees here. "Only a very few" will be offered transfers to other provinces.

Beginning Nov. 1, all Manitoba motorists will have to purchase a basic automobile insurance policy from the public insurance corporation.

Stampede Problem

CALGARY (CP) — Plans to expand facilities for the Calgary Exhibition and Stampede into a nearby residential district ran into opposition from city officials.

City planner Mike Rodgers and senior planner Stu Round told a finance committee meeting that expansion into the Victoria Park area would kill the residential district.

They recommended instead the Stampede board consider crossing the Elbow River, one bank of which they now occupy, and locate additional facilities on the other side.

Youth Charged

PONOKA, Alta. (CP) — A 15-year-old boy was charged with non-capital murder Thursday in the fatal shooting of Victoria Lee Paisley, 18, Wednesday at her home at Canadian Forces Base, Penhold.

Police said Miss Paisley was shot in the head with a .22 calibre rifle following an argument.

The boy was charged in juvenile court and remanded in custody to Sept. 17.

Ex-Chief to Appear

WINNIPEG (CP) — Dr. Oskar Reiser, former president of Churchill Forest Industries (Manitoba) Ltd., has confirmed his intention to appear before a provincially-appointed board of inquiry into the Northern Manitoba forestry development.

Dr. Reiser sent confirmation that he will appear at the inquiry this fall to company lawyers.

CFI is one of four companies involved in an integrated forestry development at The Pas, Man., which were placed in receivership last January after the provincial government claimed default of interest payments on about $94 million in provincial loans.

Dr. Reiser resigned as president in favor of Lloyd W. Hale a month ago, and is not legally bound to testify.

Inquiry Set

SASKATOON (CP) — A 10 member citizens' inquiry into use of the War Measurts Act during the Quebec crisis last fall will meet in Saskatchewan late next month or early November, an inquiry spokesman said Thursday.

Leo Johnson, who originated the inquiry, said findings of the committee which proposes cross-Canada meetings, will be published next spring.

Members hope their report will lead to a royal commission into the basis for invoking the act last October, after the kidnapping of British diplomat James Cross and the subsequent kidnap-slaying of Quebec Labor Minister Pierre Laporte.

Agreement Reached

WINNIPEG (CP) — Agreement has been reached between representatives of CJAY-TV of Winnipeg and striking employees, but neither side of the dispute has ratified terms of settlement.

John R. E. Thurston, unit chairman of the National Association of Broadcast Employees and Technicians local, said in an interview Thursday a memorandum of agreement was presented to members in a Thursday meeting, but no decision was made on acceptance.

Negotiators met Wednesday and Thursday with federal mediator J. S. Gunn in efforts to settle the strike which began June 29.

No Surprises

EDMONTON (CP) — There were no surprises Thursday when final counts of votes in Alberta's Aug. 30 election were completed, although one defeated Social Credit candidate has applied for a judicial recount.

Election-night margins stood up under the final count and confirmed the defeat of Ray Ratzlaff, minister of industry and tourism in the Social Credit cabinet, in three Hills.

The Aug. 30 count had Ratzlaff 10 votes behind Conservative Allan Warrack. The official tally reduced the deficit to eight votes — 2,970 to 2,978 — but still left Ratzlaff the loser.

B.C. News Briefs

City Battles Hydro

VANCOUVER (CP) — The city of New Westminster went to the British Columbia Supreme Court Thursday in its battle to prevent the B.C. Hydro and Power Authority from imposing what the city calls exorbitant power rates.

The city filed a suit asking that new hydro rates set for the city — which buys power in bulk and distributes it to customers — are unreasonable and should not be imposed.

The city also asked for an injunction to stop Hydro from proceeding with plans to raise the rates until the issue can be aired in court. Application for the injunction will be made Monday.

Credit Union Robbed

KEREMEOS (CP) — RCMP said Thursday two persons were arrested following a morning robbery at a credit union in this Okanagan Valley community.

The two were arrested hours after the holdup in the Keremeos area. Their names were withheld.

Two men got away with more than $3,100 after pulling a gun on credit union manager Dennis Gregoire.

Rayonier Picketed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Pickets of the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada conducted a day-long protest around the Rayonier of Canada Ltd. head offices in downtown Vancouver Thursday.

They were protesting the fourth shutdown this year of the company's Woodfibre pulp production mill, near Squamish, causing the layoff of 300 workers.

Reg Ginn, union local president, said the company "seems to be using the economic situation and the recent actions of President Richard Nixon in the U.S. for the shutdown."

NOW IT'S OVER

That Lively Year With Eva's Ghost

Reporters seldom have a personal or long-lasting involvement in the stories they cover — it is always the next one that entirely absorbs them — but the bizarre reunion of Evita and Juan Peron in Madrid last week was a spectacular exception for me.

One way or the other the life of every Argentinian is still influenced by the massive shadow of Juan Domingo Peron, though he has been in his Spanish exile since 1955, and by the ghost of Maria Eva Duarte, though she died (of cancer, at 33) nearly 20 years ago. Our lives, in the year that we were based in Buenos Aires, were affected more than most. On four occasions, over 14 months, we were blown up. You could hardly ask for a more personal involvement.

jack scott

Looking back on it afterwards I always marvelled at our innocence. Apartments were very hard to come by, very expensive, yet here was this beautiful, furnished, book-lined flat, at very reasonable rent, miraculously available for sub-letting.

The regular tenant, an elderly professor of mathematics, explained that he was taking a year's sabbatical leave into the country because of a nervous breakdown. It never once occurred to us that his nerves had been broken by being regularly blown up.

It never occurred to us, either, that his elaborate instructions on how to contact the insurance agency "in the event of broken glass" was a subtle hint that we might be up to our ankles in broken glass fairly regularly. In fairness to the professor, he had mentioned the immediate presence of Admiral Rocas, but my Spanish wasn't up to it, and I simply nodded and smiled.

Though we did not know it, until the first time we were blown up, Admiral Rocas was constantly in our view. The windows of our apartment looked directly into the windows of his, a hundred yards or less across Avenida Arenales. He was an enormous, barrel-chested man who entertained lavishly at dinner parties that fascinated us because the admiral and his guests ate and drank, without pause, for approximately four hours.

The first time we were blown up we were watching Bonanza on television, the dubbed Spanish, particularly coming from Paw and Hoss Cartwright, being a painless way to increase your vocabularly.

Without warning there was a deafening explosion and every window in our apartment seemed to sigh and then simply collapsed, straight down, in shards of shattered glass. Like a well-drilled team we leaped to the door, ran down a flight of stairs and out into the street, already jammed with great crowds. Each face was turned upwards, expectantly, to the balcony of Admiral Rocas' apartment. In a moment the admiral stepped through what was left of his French doors. He looked a wreck, his bald head and dressing gown covered with white plaster, his eyes wild with shock, yet without a second's pause he had launched into a speech of such fire and eloquence that Avenida Arenales rang with the cheers of the crowd.

Thus did the Perons, the shadow of Juan, the ghost of Evita, come, explosively, into our lives.

Admiral Rocas, we learned, had been one of the leaders of that unlikely coalition of liberal politicians, military men and the Roman Catholic Church which had ended Peron's nine years of dictatorship and sent him into exile. More importantly, he was assumed to be the brains behind that strangest, most dramatic kidnapping in all political history, the theft of Evita's body.

One day the body was there, enshrined in a crystal casket in the enormous, hideous mausoleum that Peron had built in the headquarters of the General Confederation of Labor, her elegant, honey-blonde theatrical beauty restored by two incredible years of embalming. Its very presence there after the otherthrow of her husband, a wax doll holding a spray of orchids, was a constant reminder to the masses of their followers — "the shirtless ones," as the Peronista were called — of what had seemed to them days of glory. Eight people had died in the terrible crush of humanity that stood in the rain for 18 hours at her funeral and, indeed, even today she is worshipped as a saint, the candles guttering on either side of her picture in thousands of humble homes.

It was inevitable, perhaps, that this symbol must go, and the dark deed was done, so it was said, by a group of young naval officers. The mausoleum was destroyed. The crystal coffin was taken away (to Italy, we now know) and the nation was hysterically divided in a kind of dementia that still exists today.

The extremist, bomb-happy wing of the Peronista had vowed vengeance and terrorism until the body was returned. It was no idle threat. One of their prime targets was Pedro Aramburu, Argentina's provisional president when Evita's tomb was destroyed. It took 15 years, but they finally caught up with him. Aramburu was kidnapped and murdered last year.

All of this, for us, came to seem like some intimate neighborhood gossip once we'd endured our baptism of being blown up along with the old admiral.

Oddly enough, it never occurred to us to move. For one thing, an around-the-clock armed guard was put on his apartment for several weeks after each blast, the Peronista bombers waiting patiently until it had been removed. Apartments were almost impossible to find, anyway. And, besides, it had given me such a rewarding notoriety among the corps of foreign correspondents that I was often introduced as "the man who gets blown up."

Each of the four bombings was all but identical, the admiral staggering out to his balcony covered in masonry, but undaunted (his indestructibility was credited to the ineptness of his enemies in planting their explosives in air shafts) and the cheers of his followers because, of course, in an upper-income district the sentiment was strongly anti-Peron. If nothing else, as a climate for the covering of Latin-American politics, it couldn't be bettered.

And so, when the news came out last week that Evita's body had been delivered to Peron in Madrid, clearly a gesture by Argentina's military government to heal the old wounds, I could only think, irrationally, that things will seem mighty dull from now on in Avenida Arenales.

Birds Leave For a While

Time to head south spells a cloud of starlings as they depart from Victoria West for more compatible climes. Their departure will not be mourned; the unwelcome visitors are a scourge for farmers and fruit growers, who have even considered the legality of issuing deportation orders in peak visitation years. Among weapons used to fight the birds' annual invasion are guns that fire automatically, creating loud booms, tape recordings sounding the starling's warning cry, and poison. But the persistent birds can be expected back next spring anyway.

POPULATION SHIFT PARTLY BLAMED

School Enrolment Drops

By BRIAN BUTTERS
Times Staff

Enrolment at Greater Victoria public schools has declined dramatically from last year, according to figures released by school board officials today.

The figures show enrolment as of Wednesday in School District No. 61 was 31,621. Last year, on Sept. 8, the figure was 32,231. The decline is 610 students.

By far the largest part of the decrease was registered in elementary schools. Enrolment was down by 596 students in the lower grades.

Junior high schools registered a decrease of 107 students while senior high school showed a gain of 93 students.

District Superintendent A. J. Longmore said "shifts of population" were partly to blame for the decrease.

"It's possible wage earners in the area have found new locales with better job opportunities," Longmore said, adding that major strikes last year accounted for a smaller increase in school enrolment than in previous years.

He said it is likely the Victoria area did not gain its usual number of children through immigration because prospective residents are taking second looks at economic conditions in the areas they want to move to.

School population in the area has been increasing at about a five per cent rate in recent years, he said, but that increase had fallen off to 1.1 per cent last year. This year the decrease is likely to be about two per cent.

Longmore said higher numbers of students were expected in the Glanford-Colquitz area than actually came. Decreases were also felt in the Esquimalt area, he said.

Showing consistent gains in population were Gordon Head and other parts of Saanich. Mount Douglas Senior and Reynolds Junior-Senior both registered gains along with elementary schools like Hillcrest, Campus View and Fairburn.

For the first time in recent years, Oak Bay and Victoria senior high schools showed declines in enrolment. This trend was consistent with figures for elementary schools in the inner part of the Greater Victoria area.

In the James Bay area, population continued to decline at schools like Vic West, Lampson, Beacon Hill, James Bay and South Park. George Jay lost 45 students.

Probably the main reason for decline in school populations is the low birth figures recorded six years ago, when the children entering Grade 1 this year were born.

In 1965, 2,771 births were recorded in the Capital region. That figure decreased to 2,599 in 1966 and even further to 2,553 in 1967.

Greater Victoria's birth rate is well below national standards. In Canada in 1970 the birth rate was 16 births per 1,000 people. B.C.'s rate was not far off with 15.8 births per 1,000.

Greater Victoria, however, recorded only 12.7 births per 1,000 people.

These figures, especially the decline in number of births in 1967, will be felt in Victoria schools for the next few years. It was not until 1968 that births began to increase again. Those 1968 births should account for an increase in school population figures in 1974.

Longmore said part of the enrolment decrease will be balanced by late registrations by secondary students. They have until Sept. 15 to register, unlike junior secondary and elementary students.

As late as July of this year, school board officials had predicted a gain of 36 students in the Greater Victoria school population.

Wonderland Wants Quick Decision

If Saanich council is thinking of buying his Wooded Wonderland attraction it had better say so soon, owner-manager Alf Pettersen said today.

Pettersen said the children's amusement centre near Beaver Lake has been up for sale for two weeks and there are two potential buyers, so unless the council makes an early decision "it may be too late."

The possibility of taking over the attraction under municipal or regional management when the present lease expires was aired Tuesday at a meeting of the council's parks and outdoor recreation committee.

CITY GROUP

Under consideration was a report by parks administrator Bert Richman outlining various proposals for developing municipally-operated amusements in the Elk Lake-Beaver Lake area, including a zoo and a miniature railway. The report was referred to the council.

Pettersen said one of the parties involved in negotiations is a city group which he declined to name.

He said the group also wants to buy his miniature train located at Matticks Farm and run it in Wooded Wonderland, as he had earlier hoped to do himself.

The alternative transaction could result in the centre being transferred to Vancouver or Washington state, Pettersen said.

"It's going to be a case of first come, first served," he added.

He said the current two-year lease expires in May, 1973, which effectively leaves only one more guaranteed season.

Asked if this was likely to deter any purchaser wanting to run the venture on its present site, he said: "Not if it was someone like a service organization. "I feel the only objection that has ever been raised to Wooded Wonderland is the fact that it is a profit-making concern, or at least supposed to be."

Pettersen has operated the walk-through attraction, peopled by fairytale characters, on the 10-acre site since 1961.

GO-CART DRIVER HURT IN CRASH WITH CAR

A 12-year-old go-cart driver is in satisfactory condition in hospital after his vehicle collided with a car on Atkins Road Thursday evening.

Archie Goldie, 2720 Winster, is in St. Joseph's Hospital with multiple injuries.

Colwood RCMP said the youngster drove out of a driveway at 460 Atkins about 7 p.m. and was in collision with a car driven by Leonard Pratt, 18, of 682 Wagar.

BROTHERS CHARGED

Two brothers appeared in court today and were charged jointly with possessing marijuana for the purposes of trafficking.

Judge E. F. N. Robinson remanded Danny Murphy, 27, and Melvin Stacy Harris, 22, to Sept. 17 for election of trial. Bail was set at $3,000.

Court was told that Murphy, an Edmonton warehouseman, and Harris, an unemployed Victoria truck driver, were apprehended at the Victoria International Airport Thursday. No other details were given.

arthur mayse

OVER THE PAST SEVERAL years, I have seen the words "conservation" and "conservationist" become increasingly suspect. That's a pity! because they are good, meaningful words that deserve a better fate than to be misapplied and misinterpreted.

A conservationist, by definition, is one who believes in the wisest possible use of natural resources.

He is neither a crank nor a nut. Even were it possible, he would not have the country restored to the state in which the first-comers found it.

He is aware of the laws of supply and demand, also the need for economic balance and the fact of growing population. As a reasonable person, he knows that timber must be harvested, fisheries exploited within safe limits, and minerals brought out of the earth.

He will fight for the preservation of a wilderness park, but not to keep the loggers out of tracts that are much better cut and replanted, or left to natural reforestation if such a course is indicated.

What he asks and all he asks — and here we come back to the definition — is that resources be put to their wisest possible use, whatever forms this may take.

I know many conservationists of that stamp. Some are private citizens. Some are knowledgeable men employed by industry, or functioning usefully in government jobs.

They are no hysterics, and they are no less aware than I am that a return to the first principles of conservation is badly needed.

I am not out to whitewash Industry, or government either, for its excesses. But I also dislike to see enemies being made where support might have been gained, and conservationist aims being blunted by excesses of another sort.

The tragedy of every worthwhile movement is that it is bound to attract the extremist and the faddist. When that happens, reason goes out the window, and the movement itself stands in danger of becoming discredited.

Some months ago, I aired a conclusion in print. It wasn't hastily arrived at, and I didn't come to it sitting behind an office typewriter.

It is that while first-growth timber should be preserved in specimen tracts of generous extent, the second growth flats and sidehills provide better recreation country.

An old burn, in my opinion, offers more air and sunshine. It is less oppressive, far richer in bird and animal life, and easier to get about in.

This is a personal preference, and while some experienced outdoorsmen share it, others I heard from disagreed.

Good enough. Tastes vary. What jolted me was the reaction from still others who set my ears flapping with diatribes for which the subject under duscussion was a mere springboard into emotionalism.

I was abetting those who would destroy our province, and shouldn't be allowed space in which to air such views. And so on, to the tune of woodsman, spare that tree. Any tree. Every tree.

When a lumberman insists that an ancient forest is a green slum, he makes me laugh. But the industrialist gets his laughts too, and the danger is that the faddist who is short on knowledge and long on pseudo-conservationist double talk could get conservation laughed clear out of court.

I do not claim expert status on matters relating to the use or preservation of natural resources.

All I suggest is that the keywords of conservation are "wisest possible use," and that they could stand more thinking about.

We aren't making the wisest possible use of nature's gifts today. It may be a long and weary time until we reach so happy a state of balance. But I think we are edging by slow degrees in that direction, and urge a sane approach to a vital subject.

Conservation needs friends . . . all it can attract, I think, though, that it is currently embarrassed by many who seek the name rather than the game.

For those truly concerned with wisest possible use, this advice:

Serve conservation. But don't be deluded into going off half-cocked.

Ottawa to Crack Down On Flammable Textiles

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government is working on a program to rid the Canadian market of dangerously flammable textiles.

Consumer Affairs Minister Ron Basford said in an interview this week he hopes regulations to prohibit extremely flammable textiles will be established by the end of the year.

The program would be worked out under the Hazardous Products Act, allowing his department to ban dangerously flammable textiles and to require flame-proof processing of certain products and warning labels on others.

His department would retain the power to act within 24 hours on textiles considered dangerous, Basford said. In the past, for instance, quick action was taken to prevent synthetic chenille berets from being imported. They were found to burn with an almost explosive flame.

The job of working out reasonable flammability requirements is not simple. The fabric's weave and finish make a difference. So does the use to which it is put.

Some products ignite easily but burn slowly. Rules too rigid might eliminate from the market textiles in common use for a long time.

And all the labelling in the world won't protect people against carelessness, Basford says.

Fabric testers at the department's standards branch have been doing tests for the last 1½ months on children's sleeping wear. So far they haven't found any at the really dangerous level: from 3.5 to four seconds' burning time.

From March 31, 1972, all blankets, sheets and other bedding on the Canadian market will have to meet flammability standards.

Basford says his department now is working on agents to retard flammability. The problem is that they wash out eventually.

How to Cut Corners With Your Furniture

By PAULINE GRAVES

Corners, frequently ignored in furniture arrangements, can yield dividends in floor space, if you consider them architecturally. By tailoring the furniture to wall areas, you eliminate wasted areas behind sofas and chairs, and make your room seem larger.

Such a corner is seen here, the long, low bench hugging the wall so closely that it looks like a built-in. It doubles up on functions too, in that with cushions it can be used for seating, and the sections left bare are treated as tables. Just two-feet deep, the bench occupies a minimum of floor space commensurate with seating comfort, whereas a conventional sofa or chair would take at least a foot more.

At the narrow end, between wall and sliding door, the bench fills the four-foot wall space. On the long wall, the bench is in two five-foot sections, one with four-inch cushions, the other five-foot section left clear. The design, by Darrell Howe, is simple enough, consisting of eight-inch high platforms, set on four-inch bases, indented four-inches from the front edge. This indentation creates a light look.

The design is nice, a combination of white and wood grained laminated plastic. And above, white only is used on the 8-by-9-inch hanging cabinets that house speakers in two 30-inch sections fronted with loosely woven fabric. Hi-fi and tape cassette equipment occupy the solid compartments.

Safety Rules To Protect Your Baby

TORONTO (CP) — Babies and young children have no sense of danger. There is no use telling an infant not to do something potentially hazardous and expecting him to obey. You must practise safety constantly when young children are around.

The drug industry's Council of Family Health in Canada reminds mothers that as soon as a child can manage it, he will start putting things in his mouth. As he learns to move around and pull himself up, he can reach more things.

To protect him from himself, you should store all household cleaning agents, polishes and medicines on high shelves or in locked cabinets. Do not allow your child to play with breakable lamps and ornaments, cords, sharp-edged furniture polish or similar products.

Keep Matches Out of Reach

Keep matches, lighters, coins, nuts, bolts and tools out of reach. Install safety plugs in unused wall sockets. Remove breakable lamps and ornaments, cords, sharp edged furnoture wherever you can.

Keep containers of hot food and liquids out of your child's reach. Always turn pot handles so they do not stick temptingly out over the edge of the stove.

Do not take medicines in front of your child. He will probably want to imitate you. Do keep all medicines out of reach in a locked medicine cabinet. Dispose of outdated medicines by flushing them down the toilet.

When your child can walk and climb you should have out of reach safety locks on stairway doors and gates and on exits to the street.

Be sure all window screens are sturdy and make a practice of opening windows from the top where it is possible.

By the time a child is two, he should be learning obedience, but he still cannot be expected to have judgment. You will have to remove him again and again from the same dangers with a firm no.

Think Like a Pre-Schooler

This is a venturesome age. Have a good look again at your house, garage and storage areas from the point of view of a curious, quick-moving, fearless pre-schooler. Then you should still know where he is and what he is doing at all times.

As he gets older you can begin an intensive safety training, always remembering that a young child does not really understand dangers and forgets warnings.

He should learn to handle scissors and knives safely and be warned not to handle broken glass. He should be taught not to run when he is carrying any pointed object.

Parents should keep knives, scissors, sewing kits and tools in good repair and stored in a safe place, out of reach.

Teach your child water safety as soon as possible when he is about three, if you can. Never allow him to play around water without adult supervision.

Student's Comfort First Priority In Choice of Dress

By SALLY GLOVER
Times Staff

Let's face it — it's an effort for some to stay well dressed.

Clothes are often difficult to find, they're usually too expensive and, even then, they're not likely to be as comfortable as the good old standby — jeans.

That's probably why most students drifting around the University of Victoria campus this week wouldn't rate as candidates for high-style fashion magazines. They just wouldn't make it, but they have their reasons why.

For a sneak preview of what to expect in campus fashion this year, the Times checked out Uvic during registration Thursday.

Comfort seems to be the student's first priority. And comfort means the casual look, they say.

Casual, as defined in the Oxford dictionary, means irregular, undesigned, unmethodical and careless. Certainly, many ensembles of jeans, T-shirts, sweaters and sandals fit this definition.

Such garb is "functional, in line with the budget," the students said.

Campus men, sloppier in their jean image than women, were more to the point explaining their choice of wardrobe.

"Clothes don't mean a thing to me," one said.

"These are the only things I've got," said another.

"As long as I'm comfortable and clean, that's what's important," yet another explained.

Most of the women, who looked more harmonious in their casualness, agreed that pants were simply easier to wear, more comfortable than dresses, and a must for 10-speed bicycles.

But why jeans?

"They're the only things that can be chucked on the floor at night and picked up the next morning, looking exactly the same," said a 21-year-old student.

Late risers especially endorsed this view.

"If I'm lazy and don't have time before an 8:30 a.m. class, I'll wear jeans. If I have a 10:30 a.m. class, I'll take more time to wear a skirt, knee socks or a midi," said one 20-year-old.

Some students were actually seen wearing slacks.

"I don't like running around looking like a hippie," said a 24-year-old woman. "I enjoy nice clothes. I've been in the working world for a long time and I've got all kinds of fancy clothes."

A man of the same age, wearing a short-sleeved shirt and striped trousers, said:

"These are the only clothes I own. I stole three university T-shirts. However, with my bursary, I'll buy co-ordinate-colored shirts and slacks. I won't wear a suit and I won't wear a sports jacket — just what I need to be comfortable."

Most say budget important consideration

Some students more dressy than others

STUDY SUPPORTS MAORIS' SIMPLE LIFE

Unhealthy Price Paid for 'Civilization'

NEW YORK (UPI) — Give me the simple life, goes a phrase from a popular song. A group of experts investigating the healthfulness of the simple life pattern compared with the complex structure of the western world concludes that we're paying an unhealthy price for our civilization.

We're paying for it in such areas as obesity, hypertension, arteriosclerosis, other circulatory ailments, diabetes and other degenerative diseases.

Dr. Ian Prior, an authority on cardiovascular diseases and preventive medicine, headed the research team of physicians, sociologists and anthropologists. Prior currently is director of the epidemiology unit at the Wellington Hospital, Wellington, New Zealand.

The group's eight years of study were concentrated on the Maoris, an ancient Polynesian tribe. They studied the Maoris on Pakapuka, a Pacific atoll where life, work and dietary habits have changed little in the past century. Maoris on the more civilized island of Rarotonga, and the Maoris in New Zealand.

The studies go on, but Prior has released some of the early conclusions. They are reported in the current issue of Nutrition Today, an independent scientific journal supported by three major food companies.

"We are beginning to observe that the more an islander takes on the ways of the west, the more prone he is to succumb to our degenerative diseases ... evidence now shows that the farther the Pacific natives move from the quiet, carefree life of their ancestors, the closer they come to gout, diabetes, arteriosclerosis (circulatory disease), obesity and hypertension," Prior said.

The researchers found very little salt in the Pupupukan diet, for one thing. The basic diet consists of fish (often eaten raw), coconuts in various forms (very rich in saturated fat, Prior observes), taro, a root vegetable, flour and sone rive.

In contrast to Pukapuka, the diet in Ratontonga consists of canned meat — corned beef, tinned fish, taro and rice, bananas, cabbage, onions, tomatoes and coconut sauce. Consumption of butter, fresh meat and fish depends on the economic resources of the family. Bread, from bakeries, is used much more than in Pukapuka.

Prior reports that the Ratontonga women exercise very little, if at all, since the men garden the lush soil and keeping the small houses requires little work.

Prior says the lack of activity shows on the scales. He estimates that in Ratotonga, the average young woman of 30 weighs 171 pounds. By the time she is 40, she can expect to tip the scales at 189, and if she hits 220 "she still won't be noticed."

In turn the Pukapukan women who do a lot of physical labor were not heavy belles. "Plenty of physical labor and a subsistence, not a money, economy would seem to be two blessings in disguise that commend the simple life in Pukapuka," he said.

"The New Zealand Maoris, with notably longer exposure to Europeans, can be said to have 'arrived'," says Prior. "They in fact exceed the New Zealand Europeans in the frequency with which they become victims of and die from" the diseases mentioned earlier.

Prior says his team's studies lend support "to the thesis that we in the so-called advanced nations must reassess very critically our use of many things which constitute our environment and quite clearly our habits of work and diet.

"The quality and quantity of food, our consumption of sucrose and salt, to name but two items, must be restudied.

"To be sure, we are civilized . . . but at a price."

Merchandise Bugged

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (AP) — They're bugging the merchandise to detect shoplifters at a chain of Mineapolis women's clothing stores.

Carrying an unpurchased piece of clothing through an electronic beam near the doorway switches on a red light and rings a loud bell.

"It sounds like a burglar alarm," Gil Braun, owner of the 10 Braun's and Gigi stores in the area said Sarurday.

Six shoplifters have been caught since the experiment began a week ago.

A piece of sensitized material is applied to each item of clothing in the stores. When an item is purchased, the sales clerk desensitizes the material.

If the material isn't desensitized, the electronic beam triggers the alarm when a shoplifter starts out the door.

"It's the coming thing," said Joseph Rusinko, deputy Minneapolis chief of police. "You've got 'em cold." Braun said it cost about $50,000 to buy and attach the sensitized material but he thinks it's worth it.

Curls and Waves New Look in Hair

By REBA and BONNIE CHURCHILL

Meet 'the doodle.' It's the basis of a series of swirly, curly, corky hairdos. It's not just a ringlet or a dangling wave — it's a doodle!

When Sally Struthers popularized one look of the curly locks coif on CBS-TV's "All in the Family," girls became interested.

According to Sally, part hair in the centre, apply wave set, and finger wave the top. Then, roll sides in pin curls. When dry, remove clips, and separate doodles with your fingers. There is no teasing, and there is no comb-out.

Want to wear hair up? Then, down come the doodles. Sally wears a row of mini doodles so they circle the neck, while the rest of the hair is neatly brushed to the crown. Secure with a covered elastic, and neatly tuck the ends into a grandma's top-knot.

From the same finger wave and pin curl set comes a slick-to-the-head style with doodles turned under in layers. Instead of merely spreading pincurls, hair is thoroughly brushed. Front and crown are worn close to the head, while sides are divided into three layers that are cupped under.

Brush out a few hairy doodles on the top rowe so the coiffure will have a bouncy look. Sally often clips a ribbon, flower or jewelled accessory on one side. It helps emphasize the doodles.

Group's Centennial Project: Finding City's Unusual Trees

elizabeth forbes

Is there a tree in your garden, on your street, or in your neighborhood that you believe is outstanding for its years, its size, or for its historic interest? If so, there's a group in our city that would love to know about it .

The Victoria Horticultural Society, now almost 100 years in existence, has come up with the imaginative centennial 1971 project of locating such trees and marking them in an appropriate way.

As a continuing project, the society also plans to have a map made showing the location of the trees, with a booklet telling their various stories.

Miss Doris Page is chairman in charge of the project. "So far we are merely asking if anyone knows of an outstanding tree anywhere in this area," she explains.

Won't Trespass

"We don't plant to trespass on private property. All we intend to do is note where the trees are and then keep a careful record of them. When we bring out the booklet, people will be able to find and admire, without intruding on anyone's privacy."

The committee "got off to a terrific start" Miss Page says, through help of recently retired city parks' superintendent Herb Warren.

"He had already listed notable trees in Beacon Hill Park and at Butchart Gardens, as well as single trees here and there in the Greater Victoria area."

Rock and alpine plant specialist Ed Lohbrunner has also been "very helpful."

In a loose-leaf binder, Doris Page now has listed more than 100 trees with their location and, "where possible," their history.

She flipped through the pages and quickly named an English oak in the 1200 block Fort Street "raised from an acorn taken from a Magna Carta oak in England and brought around The Horn by an early pioneer."

Tree 'Glorious'

She spoke of a "glorious" old lime tree in the St. Ann's Academy grounds and wondered "what might become of it;" of copper beeches in what was once a pioneer garden on Gorge Road, Judas trees on Belmont Avenue, and Camperdown elms at St. Andrew's Cathedral.

"There are so many beautiful old trees in this Victoria area," she said. Then, in a slightly puzzled tone she added, "but people don't seem to realize their historic value."

To substantiate that last statement she spoke of a man who bought a certain property here, mainly because it had a cluster of magnificent flowering trees which he intended to make a focal point of the development.

One day a load of rock and gravel was delivered and the driver couldn't find an open space to dump it. A carpenter yelled at a bulldozer to level a piece of ground for him. In the process the trees were uprooted.

"Needlessly," Doris Page says, with more than a little anger in her voice.

Miss Page was trained as an horticulturist at Studley College in Warwickshire.

During the Second World War she grew vegetables at a maternity hospital for junior officers' wives at Fulmer-Chase in England. When the war ended she came to Canada, visiting in Montreal, Ottawa, Hamilton and Vancouver before deciding to settle permanently in Victoria.

Just at that time Ed Lohbrunner was looking for an assistant. "I applied and got the job," she tells you. That was 23 years ago.

Next she bought a cottage in half an acre of trees, shrubs and flowers, high on a hillside above Cordova Bay.

At first she walked from there along the old B.C. Electric right-of-way, to and from work. When the right-of-way was turned into Lochside Drive, she bicycled. Now she has a car.

Propagating is one of this enthusiastic horticulturist's absorbing interests. . . . "I love to grow things from seeds."

She belongs to the rock and alpine society and goes off with its members on a field trip once a year. She is also very active in the horticultural society, especially in its twice-a-year flower show and horticultural exhibit. The autumn one, by the way, is on September 17 and 18, in St. Andrew's Hall, on Pandora Avenue.

Right now, of course, her great desire is to find trees in the Greater Victoria area that may be outstanding for their years, their size of their historic interest.

Can you help her?

DEAR ABBY...

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My daughter recently became engaged. She told me that she and her fiance have decided to have one of those "natural" weddings — the outdoor type where everything is informal.

She and her fiance are making up their own wedding service. I've never heard of this before. What's the matter with the traditional marriage ceremony? She said they're using parts of the Old Testament, quotes from Shakespeare, and the lines of some popular songs in their service! They are being married by a minister, thank God.

I think they are getting too far out, Abby. Will this type of service be considered legal? Should I interfere, or should I let them (as they say) "do their thing"?—Old-Fashioned Mother.

DEAR MOTHER: Let them do their thing. Their minister will guide them to be sure it's legal.

DEAR ABBY: Your advice to the mother who was disappointed at finding birth-control pills in the purses of her daughters, ages 19 and 21, was the worst I've read yet.

You are doing these girls a terrible injustice by assuming that because they take birth-control pills they have already made their decision to engage in premarital sex.

Birth-control pills are prescribed for many reasons: to relieve cramps, regulate the menstrual cycle and to clear up acne. Ask any doctor. Disappointed in You.

DEAR DISAPPOINTED: I am aware of the many uses for birth-control pills, but it is highly unlikely that these sisters, living at home, would have "medical problems" of which their mother was not aware. It's possible, of course, but not probable.

DEAR ABBY: When "On the Road in Indiana" is investigating roadside picnic areas for pet "souvenirs," I hope she has a sack big enough to pick up the "souvenirs" left by the two-legged dogs who have no regard for public property, i.e., beverage cans, cigarette butts, garbage, paper, etc.

We travel with two Kerry Blue terriers and a Gibbon ape, and wherever we go we are surrounded by smiling people who enjoy seeing our menagerie. And we always clean up after both kinds of dogs. Sign me . . . "On the road in behalf of . . . Mickey, Kim and Honey."

NOMAD

The reception to the new Nomad line of travel trailers at Coastline Trailer Centre has been terrific. Most people can't believe how a trailer of Nomad's quality can be sold at such unbelievably low prices. The Skyline Corp. which manufactures Nomad is the world's largest builder of mobile homes and travel trailers. That's one reason. Coastline have pared their profit margin to an absolute minimum as an introductory special, so that we can get as many Nomads on the road as possible this Fall. That's reason number two. We invite you to drop into Coastline and compare the fabulous new Nomad quality and price with any other competitive make. We think you'll agree Nomad comes out on top.

Compare this 19½ Tandem axle Nomad for value.

OUR PRICE ONLY $3850

BEAUTIFUL BURLEITH CRES.

Historically speaking, it was a portion of the famous Dunsmuir Estate and is located one block from the scenic Selkirk Water and all conveniences including modern grocery store, plus convenient bus stop just one block away.
One of the few locations where boulevards are maintained by the city.
Businessmen have chosen to locate here, and the home offered is suitable for the retired or active. There is a twin size bedroom, large modern kitchen and a spacious 15'x19' living room with brick fireplace. Extra room off the living room which could be considered as a dining area or an extra bedroom.
A birch panelled 12'x15' room downstairs could serve as a second bedroom or rec. room. Of course there is an oil furnace, new enamel laundry tubs, a workshop with bench with economical florescent lighting.
Just two steps from ground level to an attractive 7'x8' angular entrance hall gives access to this most liveable home. Your inspection is invited. Price $22,500. Phone Frank Beamish, 385-2471.

Healing Process To Be Quickened

Problems blocking organ transplants will be solved and medicine will discover ways of speeding the healing process, doctors on a panel relating medical education to community needs predicted Thursday.

Other predictions for the next 10 to 20 years:

● The cost of training doctors will continue to rise and the public will be asking "awkward" questions about it.

● Increasing pollution will produce new environmental diseases. Both doctors and public will question more closely the human values on which medical practice is based.

● The solo medical practice will be long gone and the way a general practitioner works will change. Health centres will offer not only the combined talents of doctors but other technical experts.

The panelists were part of the program of the western regional meeting of the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons of Canada. About 200 doctors, mostly from B.C. and Alberta, took part in the two-day education program which ended today.

THREE PROBLEMS

Medical schools and communities around the world face three common problems, said Prof. John Loewenthal, dean of medicine at the University of Sydney, Australia.

One is an explosion of information — immunology, enzymology, biochemistry — have just "blown up" in the face of doctors in recent years.

Then there has been the fragmentation of medicine into specialities.

And finally, the objectives of medical schools have become clouded.

VALUES

"We're very unsure of what we're trying to do."

Choice of human values was a theme pursued by Prof. Douglas Cameron, chairman of the department of medicine at Montreal's McGill University.

How can doctors devote effort to more elaborate techniques for sustaining life in malformed patients when at the same time seeming to accept increasing abortions?

The supply of doctors and use of medical assistants was a question which concerned panelists.

What the public wants to know is when they phone for one, why can't they get a doctor, said Cameron.

Only the Soviet Union is producing enough doctors to meet the country's demand, said Prof. Henry Miller, vice-chancellor and professor of neurology at the University of Newcastle upon Tyne in England.

It's difficult to pinpoint the need for doctors but it appears clear that society is unlikely to pay the cost of whatever number is needed.

PUBLIC DECIDES

In the last resort it is the public which decides the kind of doctors and medical services.

Miller said he doesn't regret the fragmentation of the profession into specialities provided every specialist is a general practitioner first. He predicted increasing specialization and a rejection of any new body of medical assistants.

Panel chairman Dr. W. A. Cochrane, dean of the medical faculty at the University of Calgary, disagreed with him. He suggested there will be some new form of doctor's assistant at work within five years.

Solo medical practice in the old sense of the word is a dead duck, said Cameron. It won't meet the needs of citizens or doctors.

What should evolve is regionalization of health services and a degree of citizen participation in shaping them. Future health centres will include other forms of professionals besides doctors "but with every patient entitled to know who his doctor is."

WASHINGTON — A U.S. senator, who up till now has supported U.S. Vietnam policies, says he may change his tune if the Oct. 3 presidential election in Vietnam is not a fair contest between two or more candidates. Senator Henry Jackson said the U.S. should not sanction the one-man referendum set up by President Thieu and should make it clear to Thieu that the U.S. commitment is to the people of Vietnam and not to any particular government.

PORT-AU-PRINCE — Haiti's new ruler, Kean-Claude Duvalier, wants to visit Canada next year. The 20-year-old president, who succeeded his father, Papa Doc Duvalier, in April, said he plans the trip to Canada, the U.S. and Europe to promote tourism, and foreign investment.

CINCINNATI — Too many people affect Joseph Lee Mullins. Thursday he pleaded guilty and demanded immediate sentencing for a $50,000 bank robbery, because he couldn't stand the overcrowded conditions at Hamilton county jail. Judge Timothy Hogan obliged and sentenced him to 20 years.

CHICAGO — A psychiatrist who studies hijackers says he has never met one who had seduced a woman. "If he's had sexual activity it was due to the advances of a sexually aggressive female," says Dr. David Hubbard of Dallas, Tex., who studied more than 40 would-be hijackers in prisons.

SEATTLE — Hairy Randall Brink has lots of sympathy but little support from his ex-fellow workers. Brink was fired from his job on the Washington State ferries after he reported to work with a fuzzy face. The men who worked with Brink said in a petition that they "regret the needless, self-inflicted suffering" of Brink but "heartily support" his dismissal. Since his discharge Brink has been picketing the Seattle ferry terminal.

EDMONTON — John Thomas missed his century by 82 days. Thomas died Thursday in Edmonton aged 99.

WINNIPEG — Toronto book publisher Jack McClelland has a word of thanks for President Nixon — "He has helped Canada come of age . . . today I'm proud to be a Canadian." The cause of McClelland's joy is the mature attitude taken by the country over Nixon's 10 per cent surcharge. After the "initial pilgrimage" to Washington, the government seems prepared to ride out the hardships expected of the U.S. move, he said.

Top Socreds Coming Here

Federal Social Credit Party leader Real Caouette and federal executive vice-president James McGillivray will tour British Columbia later this month.

The two men are vying for the party leadership. Their B.C. visit is part of an official tour of Ontario and the Prairie provinces.

No dates have been announced for the B.C. visit, but Caouette and McGillivray will spend time in Victoria and Vancouver.

Socred national president Gilbert Rondeau will be in the Maritimes for about 10 days while his colleagues go west.

The Social Credit leadership convention will be held in the beginning of October in Hull, Que.

'Blessing' If Ottawa Retaliates

New U.S. import controls on Canadian red potatoes won't hurt Vancouver Island growers but retaliatory action by Ottawa would be a blessing.

Alan Barker, manager of the Island Vegetable Co-operative Association said the new minimum size and grade regulations, effective Thursday, will be of no concern to local growers because they don't export red potatoes to the U.S.

"But if the federal government counters with restrictions on American imports, we'll finally get some protection from exceptionally low prices," he said.

Island growers claim they stand to lose more than $40,000 this year because a glut of rock-bottom priced American potatoes has forced them to continually drop prices in order to compete.

Barker claims Ottawa has done nothing thus far to protect Canadian farmers from American imports this year. In spite of the financial losses and low-priced competition, however, he said his association moved 640 tons of the home-grown variety in August.

"Local potatoes are doing well," he said, "largely because of the terrific support from Island wholesalers and retailers."

The U.S. agriculture department announced the import controls Thursday to help reduce competition for U.S. growers, although Barker says most Canadian farmers do not export red potatoes to the U.S.

Under the new regulations, red potatoes grown in the U.S. and imported from Canada must be at least two inches in diameter compared to the 1½ inches minimum size now permitted. The quality must be at least equal to U.S. No. 2 grade.

The department's consumer and marketing service said one exception will be allowed. Size B red potatoes will be allowed on the market if they are of No. 1 grade. Officials said the new size and grade requirements will remain in effect through next June.

Where Are We Going, New Course

Where Are We Going is the name of a course to be offered by the Community Services Division of Camosun College starting Oct. 14.

Instructor Ron Welsh calls it "a course in peace studies." The only other similar course in North America is being offered by New York's Manhattan College.

The Camosun course, Welsh said, will draw from sociology, psychology, militarism, science, philosophy, theology, economics and international relations.

"It is an attempt to tie all these together to get a perspective as to why man has so many problems, and if these problems can be solved, he said.

"I believe that the overall major concern for man at the moment is that the two 'ism's, socialism and capitalism, may some day come head on and one or both will do its best to destroy the other. This is the main single factor which made me decide to do the course," Welsh added.

He said his major concern about the course is that it may become overwhelmed by its own subject matter. A look at some of the discussion topics reveals this may not be easy to overcome.

One session centres on the question: Are we too late to turn back the tide of pollution? Another: Are there alternatives to war to affect social change?

GRANNY'S JELLY SCARES AIRPORT

LONDON (UPI) — An American student caused a security scare when he told a policeman at London's Heathrow Airport he was carrying some "jelly."

The student, who was not named by airport police, was taken out of a passenger line for his New York-bound flight while police examined his brown bag for gelignite, an explosive.

Gingerly opening it, a policeman found it contained a solid lump of black currant jelly.

"It's for my grandmother," the student was quoted as saying.

Union Backs Smoke Rule

The 13,000-member B.C. Government Employees Union has "no objection" to a Civil Service Commission rule requesting civil servants to refrain from smoking "in areas where the public is served."

John Fryer of Vancouver, general secretary of the union, said today the rule "Makes proper sense" and is simply a consolidation of various departmental rules in effect before.

"We believe it is a courtesy to the public, where the employee is in direct contact with the public, not to expect them to smoke," he said.

"We don't see Canada Safeway or Woodward's clerks smoking in public."

The union did not find the rule "oppressive" and had received no complaints about it.

London Bridge Rebuilt and Ready...in Arizona

LAKE HAVASU CITY, Ariz. (AP) — Historic London Bridge, transplanted from the Thames to a desert moat half a world away, will be reopened to new decades of busy service next month.

McCulloch Oil Corp. bought the 140-year-old bridge 3½ years ago at public auction for $2,460,000. Its 130,000 tons of granite blocks were dismantled and shipped 10,000 miles for reassembling here in the original form.

With haulage and reassembly, the entire project will cost more than $7 million—an expenditure that worries Robert McCulloch, company president, not a bit. His firm hired Robert Beresford, 31, a London engineer, to supervise reconstruction of the bridge.

McCulloch used an original fortune from manufacture of chainsaws and outboard motors as a springboard into land development. And his showpiece is this resort on the shores of 45-mile-long Lake Havasu on the Arizona-Colorado border.

To find a suitable place for the 1,000-foot London Bridge, McCulloch had a mile-long channel dredged from the lower Colorado River to Lake Havasu.

The excavation job scooped out two million cubic yards of earth, including the narrow neck of land which fastened the resort part of the city to the mainland. It created a two-square mile island occupied by hotels, recreational facilities, Lake Havasu State Park and the city airport.

Scheduled for completion in time for dedication of the bridge Oct. 10, the waterway is 750 feet wide at the bridge and 150 feet at each end.

The span, with its graceful arches, will be the centrepiece of an international resort centre of shops, restaurants and hotels. Another landmark will be a two-storey English pub in a blend of styles dating from 1500 to 1900.

The splendor of the bridge will be rivalled by the ceremonies attending its dedication. The lord mayor of London, Peter M. Studd, will head a delegation of top-layer society and business figures being flown by chartered plane from London to the resort city on the Colorado River.

Studd will be accompanied by his sword-bearer, mace-bearer and the town crier. The Royal Artillery's regimental band and a unit of the Royal Scottish Regiment will head a parade of some 3,500 participants in a march across the bridge.

HOUNDS OUTFOXED

CHORLTON, England (UPI) — Top hunting hounds are in the doghouse after being outfoxed.

Fifty of the hounds disappeared over the Staffordshire countryside. Bert Maiden, the man in charge of the dogs said: "The trouble was there were two foxes.

"They ran off in opposite directions. Half the hounds went after one fox and the rest after the other. It was half an hour before we realized they were missing.

Brass-Pounder Likes Helping Others

RETIRED, Fred Colmer shows one of the morse machines that were an important lifeline when he started as a telegrapher nearly 50 years ago.

The man whose telegraph office in Prince Albert, Sask., was a second home to former prime minster John Diefenbaker retired here Wednesday after nearly 50 years as a "brass pounder."

Fred Colmer, 65, of 1230 Chapman who pounded telegraph keys mostly at night — "because more happens then" chuckles when he remembers the Prince Albert days.

"He (Diefenbaker) had his law office next door to me. We'd match for coffee and I'd nearly always win. He'd never miss a hockey game. When it was over he'd walk over to my place, warm himself at the central register, discussing everything under the sun."

When Diefenbaker was making his bid to become prime minister he received a lot of neighborly joshing from his long-time friend.

One of his first actions after he topped the polls was to send Colmer a wire:

"Fred, I made it."

Colmer, who came to Victoria in 1951 to become the night wire chief for the CPR, learned telegraphy almost as soon as he had graduated from spellers.

"My father was a telegrapher. Two of my brothers are, and my sister was one too. She retired two years ago."

Colmer's many years of working nights have left him with a kaleidoscope of memories, most of them of people, drawn to his office when the bright lights were the only beacon in times of emergency.

Some memories remain more vivid than others.

They include the holidaying couple who came to him for help when they feared their child had developed polio. Their fears were right. Colmer found them a doctor and a hotel.

There's also the polot that was found unhurt after Colmer was asked to start an agent-to-agent search for his downed plane.

Being a Good Samaritan, Colmer says, has been the most rewarding part of his working life.

He'd like to continue.

"If I'm lucky maybe I can work for an answering service that helps people. There's nothing like it."

Money 'Down Drain' In Summer of '71

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Mayor William Dennison said Thursday night the federal government seems "hellbent on changing our way of life and enforcing their own peculiar philosophies on all the country."

He cited what he called "examples of how your money went down the drain in the long, cool summer of '71"—$9,000 to set up an information and referral centre for homosexuals, $15,000 for the underground newspaper Guerilla, $6,000 for an abortion opinion survey and $40,000 for a film study of the Montreal skyline.

"The most unusual gift of all went to the New Morning Centre operated by a group formerly called Red Morning, formerly called Rising Up Angry, formerly called M-M, which has been described as the most radical group in Toronto."

Balcony Planters—Many Choices

By HILDA BEASTALL

Tubs and planters on apartment balconies will be either practical, of average interest, or exotically different according to the temperament of their owners.

This is noticeable in gardening on any level.

The practical apartment gardener is likely to want herb plants and green saladings to put in now to grow for use all winter sun and is reasonably protected from the wind.

In the same situation a tub of a dozen choice daffodil bulbs, and one of a group of winter flowering heathers will be successful.

Hilda

All this, if you have checked with apartment management on allowable weight for each balcony. Average damp soil weighs 80 pounds per cubic foot; without container.

Of average interest for their early spring color a little ahead of normal will be planters of bulbs of all kinds; even with lessthan full sun, they will grow and flower.

Good to look at too will be tubs and planters made up with a careful mixture of more or less permanent small shrubs and perhaps alpine plants for spots of color. These will be attractive at all seasons, but rarely spectacular.

Some gardeners have evidenced their desire to grow the difficult and rarer plants in their balcony tubs.

The semi hardy palms are being tried. Other trees from southern climates are frequently being asked for, but they constitute a hazard.

A cold snap or severe freezing wind for several hours in winter spells their doom. The apartment dweller is scarcely likely to have old mats or bedspreads to act as temporary wrappings for large plants on a balcony.

Hardier plants with still the look of exotics (which they really are, though capable of living here) less costly in the event of loss, are such things as New Zealand-flax (Phormium tenax), bamboo of several kinds, Yucca, Wistaria on a trellis, or a dwarf flowering ornamental fruit.

I'm thinking of Malus sargentii, a delightful small crab with hundreds of white blossoms at just about eye level, followed with tiny fruits in summer; or Prunus subhirtella autumnalis, to flower obligingly in fall, winter and early spring in a sheltered spot.

In large tubs or half barrels, these would remain up to eight or 10 years before needing replacement, probably with something for a quite different effect.

September is a good time for these plantings.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED KARPIN

Generally speaking, whenever one makes any pre-emptive bid, he does not expect to fulfill his contract. However, he is perfectly willing to pay a penalty for his pre-emption; and, in return, he hopes to prevent his opponents from reaching their (presumed) makable game or slam.

Within the category of pre-emptive bids, probably the most effective call is the pre-emptive opening of four in a suit. More frequently than not, this bid creates a barrier so high that it becomes impossible for the opponents to surmount it.

Today's deal illustrates the opening bid of four in a suit in action. The hand came up in a top-flight rubber-bridge game.

East-West vulnerable. North deals.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	4♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♡.

Had South been in first or second position, he would have opened his hand with one spade. But with a passing partner, South felt that his side almost surely did not belong in a slam. So he elected to pre-empt. Actually, had he opened with one spade, East-West might well have arrived at a heart contract, at which they would have made 11 tricks.

On West's king of hearts opening lead, South made an excellent play: he discarded his three of diamonds instead of trumping! At trick two, West continued with another heart, which South ruffed.

Next came a trump to dummy's queen, after which the diamond ace was cashed. This was followed by the diamond queen, East covering with the king, and South ruffing. Dummy was then entered via, the trump jack, and on the jack and 10 of diamonds South discarded his two low clubs. His onlyq loser from here in was a club trick to West's ace.

Had declarer ruffed West's opening heart lead, he would have gone down, for he then could not have prevented East from obtaining the lead with the diamond king. A club shift by East would now have enabled the defenders to have cashed three club tricks.

Declarer had perceived, at the outset, that East had to be kept out of the lead. And by discarding a diamond, declarer made sure that East would never get the lead via the king of diamonds.

Even if West had the diamond king, declarer would have made his contract as he played it. When dummy's queen of diamonds was led (at trick five), South would have discarded a club as West's (hypothetical) king won the trick. From here in the defenders could make only their club ace.

Warnings on Deadly Clam Poisoning Posted by Officials 2 Months Late

MAPLE BAY — Signs warning that area clams may contain the so-called red tide poison which can be fatal to humans were posted Wednesday — almost two months late — on waters throughout this area.

The signs, headed Clam Diggers Beware! warn of danger during the summer months from red tide, and were posted in the Maple Bay, Bird's Eye Cove, Cowichan Bay and Gulf Island areas.

Marina operator Kurt Horn, who is also Cowichan-Malahat SPEC president, said Thursday: "It sounds pretty phoney to me. Either they close it or they don't. They shouldn't go half way. I am a little suspicious they (clams) are toxic but not from red tide. It is strange they should put these notices up when the season ends."

Red tide is a toxic condition involving clams and other molluscs which can prove fatal to people who eat them.

The name comes from the color of water containing a certain type of organism. Clams ingest the organism and concentrate the poison which has been blamed for a number of deaths in the past. Some trace of the condition usually exists in B.C. waters each summer.

Eric Hall, member of the Maple Bay office of the Department of Fisheries, said that toxicity is not too high "but more or less dangerous right now."

He added that the warning is meant to apply especially for mussels. He confirmed that the notices were posted throughout the Maple Bay, Bird's Eye Cove, Cowichan Bay and Gulf Island areas.

The department in Nanaimo said there is no danger in the Maple Bay areas. A spokesman said the notices had just been sent over from the Vancouver office and so they were posted.

When pressed for comment on the fact that the signs were posted now although the warning stresses danger in the summer, the spokesman, who was not identified, said: "We just got them, okay?"

Inspectors at the local and Nanaimo Health Units said a red tide warning had been issued several months ago but they were not aware of a recent warning.

Teen-Ager Show Featured At Cowichan Fair Tonight

Today's program includes a horse show, judging dairy beef and cattle, swine, flowers, sheep, and a flower show.

Tonight there will be a teen-ager show on the outdoor stage at 6:30 p.m. featuring folk singer Jim Dougan; Pablo, a band with three Duncan boys; and the Shalom Singers from Victoria.

Official opening of the three-day exhibition and the new $15,000 outdoor stage will be conducted by Cowichan-Malahat MLA Robert Strachan at 2:20 p.m. Saturday.

Following will be a variety show featuring a singing group called the Totem Tones, the Margaret Cafison School of Dancing, and Vancouver magician George Woodcraft.

That evening during the special centennial show at 6:30 the Totem Tones will perform once again along with the Midnight Ramblers from Victoria.

On Sunday entertainment will include groups such as the University of Victoria's international folk dancing group, a Ukrainian dance troupe from Victoria, East Indian dancers, Sons of Norway, Cowichan Indian native dancers and Cathay Dancers from Victoria.

. . . 'sacrificial lamb?'

PETITION CIRCULATED

Residents Support Russian

CAMPBELL RIVER (CP) — A petition is being circulated here asking the immigration department to grant Soviet seaman Sergei Kourdakov political asylum.

Lawyer Al Lazerte, spokesman for those circulating the petition, said Thursday the petitioners fear Mr. Kourdakov may be returned to the Soviet Union as a "sacrificial lamb" in order not to upset the forthcoming visit to Canada of Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin.

The seaman swam ashore from his fishing vessel last Saturday, landing at Tsu in the Queen Charlotte Islands. He appeared before an immigration department special inquiry in Vancouver Wednesday and asked for asylum.

The transcript of the inquiry has been sent to Ottawa and an anonymous Vancouver man signed a declaration Thursday offering to post bond for the seaman's release pending a decision.

Mr. Lazerte said he has sent telegrams to both government and opposition MPs Thursday asking that Mr. Kourdakov be given asylum.

The seaman is being held in the Vancouver city jail, where persons suspected of illegal entry are held under contract with the immigration department.

OBJECTIVE: CLEANER MILLSITES

Victorian Invents Chip-Licker

A chip-licker to help the forest industry control harbor pollution through spillage has been invented by Richard Sewell, creator of the well-known oil slick-licker.

The Victoria man said testing of a prototype will be carried out and perfection of the new machine is expected before the end of the year.

Sewell said the machine is designed primarily to pick up chips spilled at millsites during barge-loading. The fragments are a problem to mill operators and others who use the waterfront.

With modifications the chip-licker may be used to recover spilled sawdust and large pieces of flotsam up to two feet long, the inventor said.

"It's past the theory stage but it is still a prototype," Sewell said.

Meanwhile, Sewell's R. B. H. Cybernetics, Patents and Processes, Ltd. continues the manufacture, licensing and marketing of the slick-licker internationally.

Contracts and agents have been established in the U.S., Europe, the Middle East, Malaysia, the Antipodes, North Africa and other oil-conscious areas, and efforts are being made to expand the organization in South America and Africa.

The French department of merchant marine shortly will sponsor an important demonstration of the device at Brest.

Sewell said 10 tons of crude oil will be dumped in the harbor for the slick-licker to wipe up.

Assisting with auxiliary equipment — which includes holding vessels, booms and other mechanical aids — will be a Swedish firm associated with R.B.H. Cybernatics.

The Canadian government has bought five slick-lickers, all for use on the eastern seaboard. Sewell is aware of discussions by government departments for some form of west coast pollution protection, but there are as yet no firm plans or budget to set up anti-pollution measures.

Sewell drew attention to a new government report showing that nearly 45 tankers a month call at Puget Sound ports at present, carrying 28,000 barrels of crude oil and 220,000 bbls. of refined petroleum products daily.

As northern oil is tapped for the western and mid-western U.S. markets, this flow into Puget Sound area could rise to one million bbls. of crude and products each day, the report said.

It also emphasized the greater danger of pollution through oil spills on the B.C. coast than on the California coast or eastern Canadian seaboard because of the nature of land and sea masses.

NDP Plan Six-Day B.C. Tour

New Democratic Party MLAs begin a six-day tour of British Columbia Sept. 18.

Between eight and 10 MLAs including Party Leader Dave Barrett will take the PGE Railway to Prince George on Sept. 18.

"Unlike the premier," said Barrett Thursday, "we'll travel with the ordinary people."

Barrett explained his party members will not hire a private car. Whistle stops are planned in Squamish, Mount Curry and Lillooet.

An open caucus meeting, the fifth since Barrett became party leader, will be held in Prince George city hall Sept. 19.

The group will stay at The Inn of The North where it will hear presentations by seven citizens groups.

Next stop is Terrace on the 19th after a ride on the CNR train from Prince George. The following day the party will travel to Prince Rupert for a luncheon followed by an open caucus meeting in the evening.

On Sept. 21, the caucus will meet citizens groups and take the ferry to Kelsey Bay the same day.

On Sept. 23, the party will arrive in Nanaimo for a social gathering.

Barrett said this is the longest tour his party has planned.

VSE to Discipline Any Rule-Breakers taken against investment Exchange if it is shown exchange rules were broken in recent trading of Ardo Mines Ltd. B warrants.

The assurance came today from VSE president John Van Luven, who also said the method of financing company undertakings through the sale of warrants to buy capital stock is under active reappraisal.

"The idea was a good one, adopted because standard underwritings were hard to come by last year," Van Luven said.

But if certain operators have adopted the technique of driving up market value via conserning, "the exchange may have to re-examine this method of financing."

Trading in Ardo B warrants was halted by the exchange Thursday and the order remains in effect today after a group of investors, primarily from Victoria, claimed to have bought more than 97,000 warrants although only 71,250 were outstanding.

It is suggested a number of investment dealers sold the warrants short, which is permissable, but without having borrowed covering stock, which is against VSE regulations.

The result is that the investor group may ask an inflated price when selling shares back to the dealers who must have them to cover their previous transactions.

A substantial number of these shares are reported to have been sold off by the group Thursday at around $5 each.

When trading was halted Thursday morning on the exchange, the last sale was at $1.40.

Van Luven said the halt was ordered because of the wide discrepancy between the warrant price and the price of Ardo common stock, which closed at 29 cents.

CHECKING

He could not say when the warrants would be restored to open trading.

Meanwhile, he said the exchange is checking the short position of listed companies, where transactions ought to show up.

Dealers are required to report short sales and the exchange publishes statistics regularly.

Ardo B warrants entitle a holder to buy common shares up to 5 p.m. Oct. 1 for 71 cents each, nearly 2½ times the current value of common shares.

Three Die As Planes Collide

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP)—Two private planes collided, killing the three persons aboard, and plummeted into a residential section of this Los Angeles suburb, starting several backyard fires.

No one on the ground was injured.

Fiery debris caused $10,000 damage to one home.

One plane, a Cessna-150 with two persons aboard, slammed into a house and disintegrated. The other, a Piper Colt, tore down power lines as it plunged into an alley and burned.

Authorities said the collision occurred Thursday in clear skies at an altitude of about 1,500 feet shortly after the Cessna had taken off from Santa Monica Airport.

Police identified the occupants of the Cessna as Gerald Dubal, 38, of West Los Angeles, a flight instructor, and Jerrold I. Rudelson, 43, of Beverly Hills, a student pilot. The four-place Piper was flown by Marvin Aardema, 51, of Hollywood.

Scott to Run As 'Serious' Candidate

"Lighthouse Philosopher" Bill Scott announced today he will run for mayor of Victoria on Dec. 11, and promised he will be a "serious" candidate this time.

At a press conference at the Century Inn, Scott said the city it "verging on financial bankruptcy" and is trying to bail itself out by "bulldozing" through projects like the Reid centre.

Scott, a pawnshop and rest home operator who will be 74 in February, said he wanted to end the image he has acquired as a "crackpot, trouble maker and rebel." He said the image has been fostered by the press, which has helped him to be held up to "ridicule and scorn."

He has run a number of times, unsuccessfully, for civic office.

Networks Flash Year of Change

Don't get your hopes up too high, but the two Canadian television networks and the three American have come with their most varied new season to date.

But with every network introducing a record number of new programs, getting away from last season's stress on "relevance," a lot of gimmick situation adventures and comedies are apparent.

There will be more feature-length movies on prime time and less variety shows (even the Sunday night Ed Sullivan show which has been on television since the Beginning was chopped).

There will also be a lot of specials, documentaries, news features, and even some ambitious drama specials.

A main reason for the big change in Canadian programming is the content quotas set down by the Canadian Radio-Television Comission.

CBC is introducing 28 new shows, 14 of which are Canadian, to surpass its 60 per cent Canadian quota. CTV has 11 new shows, five produced in Canada, to exceed its 50 per cent quota.

CBC's biggest effort of the year will be The Whiteoaks of Jalna, which will have 13 one-hour episodes adapted from that Canadian chronicle, the Jalna novels of Mazo de la Roche. A cast of a 100 will feature Kate Reid and Paul Harding. The series is tentatively scheduled for early January.

Another highlight should The Tenth Decade (debut: Oct. 20), which is an eight-part recollection of the ten years John Diefenbaker and Lester Pearson dominated Canadian politics.

The CTV will boast Rollin' on the River, (debut: Sept. 18), a Canadian-U.S. co-production taped in Toronto and widely syndicated in the States. It features Kenny Rogers and the First Edition and a Toronto-based clown named Billy Van singing pop and folk music.

Following is a breakdown of the new regular programs on all five networks.

CBC

The Benny Hill Show (debut: March 8) is an hour-long British comedy series starring the film and telly personality.

Elizabeth R (Dec. 5) is a six-part BBC series, each 90 minutes, covering the life of the great queen from her teenage years to her death at 69. Oscar-winner Glenda Jackson stars.

In the Mood (Sept. 16) is a big-band series. See page 15 story on host Jack Duffy.

Irish Rovers (Sept. 15) is an extension of their successful summer series.

The Jimmy Stewart Show (Sept. 18) features the long-time TV holdout as a college professor.

THE CELEBRATED Victoria Trio will give a recital from historic Craigdarroch Castle here over CBC-TV's Music to See on Sunday, at 5 p.m. The trio, seen in rehearsal and performance, will play selections from Maurice Ravel's Trio in A Minor and a portion of the First Movement from the Schubert Trio in B Flat Major. Members of the trio—violinist Sydney Humphreys, left, pianist Robin Wood, centre, and cellist James Hunter—are musicians with the Victoria Conservatory of Music, which is housed in the century-old castle. SESAME STREET CHANGES

Sesame Street, the widely-acclaimed television series for youngsters under six, will initiate its second series of new hour-long programs on CBC-TV Thursday, Oct. 7 at 11 a.m.

This second semester of color shows will again follow the successful format set last season, but will include several new curriculum elements — among them new production features aimed at further preparations for:

- Reading, with emphasis on letter sounds and a specially-selected, sight vocabulary.
- More advanced numerical skills, including the teaching of simple addition and subtraction, as well as counting frm 1 to 20.
- A more comprehensive approach to teaching reasoning and problem-solving.
- And new material designed to better reach key ethnic groups, such as the teaching of English vocabulary to Spanish-speaking youngsters.

The four resident "hosts" of Sesame Street — a typical city street — will again be Matt Robinson, who plays Gordon, the high-school teacher of science; Loretta Long, as his wife Susan, a public-health nurse; Bob McGrath, as Bob, a fellow teacher; and Will Lee as Mr. Hooper, owner of the street's busy (and popular) candy store.

The famous Jim Henson Muppets will again be featured on the series, with the distinctive characters — Ernie and Bert, Big Bird, Oscar the Grouch, and others — given voice by Hanson, Frank Oz, Carroll Spinney and other members of the troupe.

Live-action films and cartoons by the Children's Television Workshop of New York, creator of Sesame Street, will again be featured, as will appearances by well-known personalities in teaching roles — among them team members of the New York Knicks and Mets; actor-director Alan Arkin and his actress wife Barbara Dana, Flip Wilson, comedienne Carol Burnett, Leon Bibb, Pete Seeger, Lucille Ball, Andy Williams, the Smothers Brothers, Diahann Carroll, Jim Nabors, Gary Owens of Laugh-In, and the famous Bonanza family.

PRIVATE EYE series called Cannon, which will star versatile performer William Conrad, debuts on CBC-TV Monday at 8:30 p.m. Cannon is a former police lieutenant who has found it difficult to operate within the law enforcement system and has established himself as one of the foremost private eyes in the field.

WEEK'S SPECIALS

Friday

Hey, Cinderalla. The Sesame Street Muppets are featured in this spoof of Cinderella with super-cool Kermit the Frog playing host and introducing the life-size puppets fashioned by director-muppeteer, Jim Henson. Our heroine is played by a Canadian actress, Belinda Montgomery. On 11 at 7:30.

Rowan and Martin's Laugh-In. Martha Mitchell and Raquel Welch join Dick and Dan in their fifth-season opener. Mrs. Mitchell takes pot shots at the Democrats and chats with Ernestine (Lily Tomlin) and Gladys Ormphby (Ruth Buzzi) and wonders how she can be more like Miss Welch. Alan Sues and Gary Owens are back, too. On 2 and 6 at 8.

Tom Jones. Tom cuts loose with some standards in this concert, his final special of the season. With a low-key guest list, Tom takes up much of the show, wriggling and warbling his way through "I, Who Have Nothing" (ha!) and other such Jonesisms. On 6 at 10.

Saturday

Miss America Pageant. Bert Parks emcees the 51st annual tear-filled transfer of the crown from the head of Miss America 1971 to Miss America 1972. It promises to be no different than the 50 silly preceding affairs except that it has become a prime target for Women's Liberation. Mary Ann Mobley (a former Miss America) and her husband give Bert a hand. On 5 at 7.

Where the Good Times Are. KVOS's top executive introduces Channel 12's new season. Excerpt of many of the new shows are featured along with a close-up look at what promises to be the best new season in years. Where have we heard that one before? On 12 at 7:30.

Peggy Fleming at Sun Valley. Skater Peggy Fleming and ski champ Jean-Claude Killy star in this variety-on-ice show. A must for those keen on "ice follies." An added attraction will be the currently riding high group, The Carpenters. On 5 at 9.

Decisions! Decisions! A studio audience vote determines the plot line of this experimental two-hour comedy drama starring Bob Newhart, Jean Simmons and Jill St. John. On 5 at 10.

Sunday

A Visit With the First Lady Filmed in both Washington and San Clemente, this is Mrs. Richard M. Nixon's first television in-depth interview. The film portrait includes an intimate look into her life before and after her marriage and some of the official duties involved in being the wife of the president of the United States. On 4 at 7:30.

Hey, Hey, Hey — It's Fat Albert. Very funny animated tale based on the characters from comedian Bill Cosby's monologues. The tackle championship of the whole world hangs in the balance when Fat Albert refuses to pla. On 5 at 7:30.

The Funny Side. In a preview of the series of the same name, Gene Kelly is host of a humorous guide to courtship and marriage, as seen by five versions of the American Couple. On 5 at 8.

Jane Eyre. For those who missed it the first time, George C. Scott and Susannah York star in the excellent television adaptation of Charlotte Bronte's classic novel. On 5 at 9.

Pakistan—News Special. A film report on the civil war in Pakistan, documenting the events that led to East Pakistan's rebellion and the slaughter and tragedy that followed. On 8 at 9.

The Doris Mary Ann Kappelhoff Special. Doris Day provides nostalgia with a look at her early days in show business. Music with her guest star, Perry Como, glamor with an elaborate fashion show and plenty of DD-like comedy and dance round out the show. On 7 at 10.

Monday

The Brain. From cells to computers, from technology to philosophy, this program presents a factual and fanciful study of the human brain. A repeat. On 9 at 6:30.

Burt Bacharach. The ward-winning sounds created by Bacharach and sung by Dionne Warwicke, Joel Grey and French singer-guitarist Sacha Distel. At 7:30 on 4.

If You Turn On. This Emmy-award winning special features Carol Burnett, Arte Johnson, and Greg (Mission: Impossible) Morris who, together with medical experts and young people, discuss the problem of drug abuse. They examine the myths and truths involved in the use of drugs from marijuana to barbiturates through the hallucinogenics and heroin. On 12 at 7:30.

Bob Hope Special. For his first of the season, Bob surrounds himself with women: Edie Adams, Dr. Joyce Brothers, Imogene Coca, Angie Dickinson, Phyllis Diller, Nanette Fabray, Zsa Zsa Gabor, Martha Raye, Jo anne Worley and Jacqueline Susann, to name a few. On 5 at 9.

It's a Wacky World. Quite an extravaganza, with a cast of more than 200 international actors and comedians headed up by Tony Curtis in London and Elke Sommer in Munich. On 5 at 10.

Tuesday

The Funny Side. On 5 at 9:30. See Sunday.

Wednesday

You Are There. Ordeal of a President traces the dramatic sequence of events that led to Woodrow Wilson's reluctant decision to involve the United States in the First World War. The program introduces the CBS News series of "eye-witness recreations" of historic events and will air regularly during the coming months. Walter Cronkite is anchorman. On 12 at 7.

Thursday

The Brain: See Monday for details.

Fashion Showcase. This is the first half of an annual fashion show held at the Bayshore Inn with Jean Cannem providing the commentary.

Mazurki the Mauler Is a Pussy Cat

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Mike Mazurki is a man of terrifying proportions and physiognomy.

Heavyweight champion Joe Frazier might scream in fright should they meet in a dark alley.

Compared to Mazurki, Boris Karloff was a leading man.

Despite his lack of conventional facial beauty, Mike is one of the co-stars of the new Chicago Teddy Bears, playing a doorman-bouncer in the Al Capone days of the Windy City.

He is an eroded slag heap of a face traversed by gullies. The voice is a kettle drum filled with boulders.

For these reasons he has appeared in more than 150 movies mostly gangster and sometimes as an Indian, although it is suspected the Indian invasion of Alcatraz was a protest to Mike's Apache roles.

Truth is Mazurki is a pussy cat.

4,000 MATCHES

He is an extraordinarily gentle man whose facial contours were imprinted over 4,000 wrestling matches in a span of 35 years. The thumbs of adversaries such as Strangler Lewis on Mike's epiglottis explain his belicose basso.

"I like the idea of my role in this new series," Mike rasped during a shooting break. "I get to play a good guy for a change.

"The show is a kind of 'Untouchables' in a comedy vein, and without the violence. We sound like we're going to be violent. We make faces and threats, but nobody really gets hurt."

Lewis Gets Top Pledge

NEW YORK (AP) — Comedian Jerry Lewis has concluded his latest annual television marathon for the benefit of muscular dystrophy with contribution pledges totalling $8,125,387.

The telethon was seen coast-to-coast on 121 stations and its pledge total was a record for programs of its kind, the Muscular Dystrophy Associations of America, Inc., announced Monday.

Lewis was on stage from 10:30 p.m. Sunday to 6:30 p.m. Monday and was joined by dozens of other entertainers and by government and labor figures.

WEEK'S MOVIES

wife. Stewart Granger, Dana Wynter. on 6 and 8 at midnight.

Copacabana Palace. We don't know what this is. If you're curious enough stay up to 1:05 a.m. and see it on 12.

Thursday

Harper (1966 xxx). Paul Newman is a tough private eye hunting for a missing millionaire. Great ending to a subtle, suspenseful plot. Also featuring Lauren Bacall and Shelley Winters. On 7 and 12 at 9 p.m.

Mr. Arkadin (1959 xxx). Anything with Orson Welles in it has merit. And he directs it, too, with his usual offbeat flair. On 6 and 8 at midnight.

Sword of Ali Baba (1965 x). The ghastly footage turned in by the director was hacked in despair by the film editor. And, then as a demented afterthought. they inflicted it on children movie-goers. On 7 at midnight.

The Loves of Joanna Godden (1947 xx). Low-key, slow-paced drama but commendably acted and directed. On 2 at midnight.

Witness to Murder (1954 xx). Barbara Stanwyck sees the murder. George Saunders commited it, and Gary Merrill tries to solve it. A well-acted minor suspense tale. On 12 at 1:05.

It's hard to be a working soldier.

This week BC-TV's Tuesday Night series looks at the current Ulster crisis in a historical context. The documentary, produced by Martyn Burke, was filmed in Belfast during recent riots and includes scenes such as on left.

The Sunday at Nine series on CBC-TV willl present Keir Dullea, right, as Capt. Adams, in Firing Squad.

Adams, haunted by the memory of a horrifying incident under fire during the Second World War, is assigned to a base where he commands a firing squad.

A Man of Many Movies Finally Goes to TV

By LAWRENCE LAURENT
The Washington Post

Glenn Ford didn't exactly come to television with his hat in his hand and begging for a job. He had to be asked frequently, and he turned down dozens of offers before he agreed to do Cade's Country.

This is Ford's first television series, a contemporary law and order show that is set in the southwest. He is a deputy, responsible for an immense area and he rides a jeep, not a horse.

Glenn Ford at 55 is a complicated man, given to spells of swirling activity and periods of quiet brooding. He likes to read and he likes to collect things. He lives in a magnificent house in Beverly Hills, and he lives alone. He designed the house and it was built nine years ago, furnished with chandeliers from Prague, glass from France and lamps from England. His books were bound in London and this house has a few unusual comforts.

He sweats in his private sauna, relaxes in his billiards room, reads in his library, drinks from his wine cellar and watches movies in his screening room that has "the finest" theatrical projection equipment.

Plants grow in the entrance hall and the walls are covered with holographs — handwritten letters by men that interest Ford. These include Winston Churchill, Abraham Lincoln, George Bernard Shaw, F. Scott Fitzgerald and Voltaire. There are also framed photographs — emphasizing Ford's military career as an enlisted man and an officer in the Marine corps and his work as a commander in the navy on duty in Vietnam in 1967. Ford is now a captain in the navy reserves.

"This is a bachelor's house, I must admit," Ford said. "It's not really a house for a woman."

(Dinah Shore lives across the street. Rita Hayworth is next door).

Ford has been married — and divorced — twice. He was married for 17 hears to Eleanor Powell. They had a son, Peter Newton, who was born in 1946. He was married last year and will play one of his father's aides in Cade's County. Ford and Miss Powell were divorced in 1959, and the Associated Press reported that she received $500,000.

The second marriage was to beautiful, intensely ambitious Kathy Hays. Ford sighs and says, "that year of my life doesn't exist."

FORD
. . . the collector

"Capable and versatile" are the terms most feequently applied to actor Ford. He has starred in 120 feature motion pictures since he made Heaven with a Barbed Wire Fence in 1939. Ford doesn't remember that film very well, nor does he have much recall of Men Without Souls that he made in 1940. He says: "The only important film I made before going into service was So Ends Our Night. It was an important film to Ford because veteran actor Frederic March impressed upon him the importance of creating a "relaxed atmosphere."

March taught Ford "by example" the importance of having friendly professional relations with the people working in films. He still works at creating a "relaxing atmosphere" on the sets where he is working.

Ford's memories include only the most pleasant ones of his old boss, Harry Cohn, who — to most people — is recalled as the "tyrant of Columbia Pictures." Not to Ford: "I could always talk to him. If I didn't want to do a picture and I had a good reason he would always go along with me."

Ford's proud professionalism in his craft has left him with only one regret. He should never have played golfer Ben Hogan in a film called Follow the Sun.

"Ben begged me not to take the role. He said if I took it I would never play golf again. At the time, I loved golf and had a seven stroke handicap at Bel Air.

"So I took the role and I had to learn to swing exactly like Ben Hogan. We set up a net in my yard and with Ben as my instructor I began hitting golf balls. Every day. All day long. Until my hands bled. Until the blisters turned to calluses.

"Ben was right. After we finished the picture I never played golf again. Not in 20 years.'

He played everything else, however, at least in movies. He was at home in westerns, at ease in romance and adventure tales, comfortable in serious drama and surprisingly skillful in comedy. In 1958, he was the number one money-maker in Hollywood.

This kind of experience enabled him to change with the shifting nature of television. CBS-TV originally approached him to do a "relevant" series, a half-hour situation comedy about a police detective who operated a settlement house. He agreed, but when 1970-71 season ruined "relevance," the network decided the whole thing was a bad idea.

"How about a contemporary western?" he was asked.

Said Ford: "I've been known to do that kind of a show."

That kind, indeed. Or just about any other kind.

Bowling, Booze and Stars Thrown Together

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — No one ever called bowling the sport of kings.

Nor is propelling a ball toward 10 pins at the end of a long wooden runway a favored pastime of the exotic Hollywood crowd.

But put them together — bowling and stars — and the results can be amusing, fascinating, hilarious, a drag (choose one).

Celebrity Bowling is the name of the show which made its debut last season. While Mr. Nielsen didn't rate it above the super bowl joust between Baltimore and Dallas, it did create sufficient interest to be renewed this year as a syndicated show.

"Bowling is America's favorite indoor sport," said co-producer Joe Siegman who may or may not have his facts straight.

LITTLE HOLES?

"One of the reasons we have the co-operation of the National Bowling Council is to get away from the low-brow reputation bowling has. The average bowler earns $10,000 a year."

Siegman earns more than that and happens to be a bowler himself.

The celebrities bowling on the show must indeed send the statistics on bowlers' incomes soaring.

In the series of 26 half-hour shows which are being taped in four days this week — are many famous names and faces who don't know the purpose of the little holes in the ball.

Others are expert bowlers.

During the four-day frenzy of bowling a bar has been open all day long while the stars mill around awaiting their turns at the two lanes.

A few of the bowlers to be seen in the coming season are Ernest Borgnine, Laurence Harvey, Dick Martin, Burl Ives, the Lennon Sisters, Richard Long, Leslie Uggams, Ed Ames and that cop team from Adam 12, Martin Milner and Kent McCord.

A professional bowler will be on hand, out of sight of the cameras, of course, to give points to those who haven't bowled before.

LOSING VIRTUE

"This is the only sport on television where losing is a virtue," Seigman said. "Viewers don't get frustrated watching the competition. It's not like a baseball or basketball game."

"There aren't any set teams. The various celebrities play together in one game, and then are opponents in the next. We've got 55 movies, television and nightclub personalities this year.

"The celebrities bowl for prizes, but they go to members of the audience. For instance if one of our stars bowls 150 or more, a ticket is drawn and a member of the audience wins a prize.

"If one of our bowlers hits 210 or better the lucky ticket holder picks up a brand new car."

Asked what happened if a star bowled 300, a perfect game, Siegman said nothing.

Man at the Top (Dec. 22) has Kenneth Haigh as the ruthless opportunist of Room at the Top movie fame. It's a British import.

Midweek (Sept. 30) is an expansion of Weekend.

No, That's Me Over Here (Oct. 6) is more British humor.

JANSSEN
. . . now pursuing

O'Hara, Treasury Agent (Sept. 16) has one-time fugitive David Janssen now pursuing.

CTV

Nichols (Debut: Monday) is a turn-of-the-century sheriff series starring James Garner.

The Partners (Sept. 17) features Don Adams in his patented role as a bumbling detective.

The Persuaders (Sept. 14) has Tony Curtis and Roger (The Saint) Moore as a couple of shallow adventurers who wisecrack around women and danger.

Story Theatre (Sept. 12) is another co-production and it derives from a Broadway adaptation of the Tales of the Brothers Grimm and the fables of Aesop.

CBS

Funny Face (debut: Sept. 18) is Sandy Duncan, a newcomer to Hollywood, who plays a student teacher with a chipmonk voice who acts in television commercials.

The New Dick Van Dyke Show (Sept. 18) has a graying Dick playing the host of a TV talk show. In this comedy series he has a new wife, Hope Lange.

Cade's Country (Sept. 19). See Page 9.

The CBS Sunday Night Movies (Sept. 19). This two-hour series of movies runs over the one hour Ed Sullivan used to have.

The Jimmy Stewart Show. See details under CBC.

The Funny Side (Tuesday) is a series of comedy sketches about how different kinds of couples react to modern problems. Host is Gene Kelly.

Sarge (Tuesday) is a top detective turned priest. And George Kennedy, the star, is no bland Bing Crosby.

NBC Mystery Movie (Wednesday) is three law-and-order mini-series: McMillan and Wife (see Page 13); Co-Jumbo, which stars Peter Falk as a wily, rumpled police detective, and McCloud, a returnee starring Dennis Weaver.

The D.A. (Sept. 17) is a Jack Webb-produced (won't he ever go away?) series about an infallible, super-brilliant district attorney played by Robert Conrad. And old dog-eared Henry Morgan will be there somewhere yapping away.

ABC

Getting Together (Sept. 18) is about two impoverished young songwriters who are looking for that big hit. Fortunately, there is a little more to it than that. But no much.

The Man and the City (Wednesday) has Anthony Zorba Quinn as the mayor of a southwestern U.S. city. Of course, he's a man of the people and bigger than life.

STEWART
. . . finally gives in

Shirley's World (Wednesday) has many-talented Shirley MacLaine cast as a reporter-photographer for a news magazine who hops around the world landing in misadventure.

Longstreet (Thursday) has James Franciscus as a blind insurance investigator who functions as if he has eyes in the back of his head.

CHILDREN'S PAP CUT DOWN

U.S. television networks will cut down the Saturday and Sunday morning pap they have been offering children for years.

Now, starting Saturday morning, they will try to make children's programming meaningful, a purveyor of knowledge, an instructional instrument which will do more than keep children in a dazed, out-of-the-way state.

With a great big flourish, all three networks have changed weekend morning programming, instituting major revisions designed to improve the quality as well as the thrust.

CBS-TV, for instance, inaugurates In the News, a series of current events and topical news designed for school-age children which will be presented eight times each Saturday in 2½-minute segments before the hours of 9 a.m. through 1 p.m.

CBS also launches its new version of You Are There, the news series of eyewitness re-enactments of historical events at 12:30. The first episode is The Mystery of Amelia Earhart. The CBS Children's Film Festival, featuring old kids' favorites Kukla, Fran and Ollie as hosts, opens at 1 with the classic Cry Wolf.

NBC-TV's contributions are Take a Giant Step from 10:30 to 11:30, a live series which each week will take a single topic for discussion by two to five teenage hosts, supported by films and tapes. The program is designed to build judgment and confidence, vocabulary and enrich their knowledge. On NBC-TV, today will mark the return of award-winning Mr. Wizard, noon to 12:30, with a new ultra-modern electronic centre as his set, combining entertainment and education.

ABC-TV's new network series is Curiosity Shop, 11-noon designed to stimulate the imagination of young viewers. It will teach youngsters how to tie a shoelace, hold a bat, the origin of handshaking.

Will Television Kill Rock Hudson?

HOLLYWOOD (TV Time) — Nudging 46 years of age, with some 58 motion pictures behind him, Rock Hudson will plunge into the TV scene this fall in a series titled "McMillan and Wife."

He doesn't like to think of it as a TV series, but that's what it is even though it's scheduled for only six episodes with an option by NBC for a possible two additional segments.

His show is one of three alternating 90-minute series which NBC will broadcast on Wednesday nights under the deceiving title of Mystery Movie.

Hungry Squab

So it was that Hudson turned up at one of those gosh-awful mass interview sessions which the networks, (and with straight faces at that) like to think of as "press conferences."

Sitting in on one of them gives a columnist the feeling he's a hungry squab waiting to be served a feast of regurgitated press releases from the mother publicity pigeon.

This particular session was set up at the Century Plaza Hotel in Beverly Hills, complete with a network press agent in charge of the feeding program and a microphone planted front and centre while a network tape recorder lurked in the background capturing for posterity each snort and wheeze.

So it was Hudson, replete with moustache, double-knit striped slacks and matching socks, arrived 25 minutes late, apologizing. "I went to a bridge party last night . . . up till 3 or 4 o'clock. So I overslept."

But enough of this frivolity and idle chatter. Let's get down to the serious questioning, the staff which reflects on our national health and the state of the world.

The first question was something to the effect of why is a great big ol' movie star like Rock Hudson gonna be in a li'l ol' TV series.

"I've been resisting a series for a long time," he began, gazing firmly into the eyes of his interrogator. "I hate series because it's a saturation for the viewer and for the player, so the same part week after week. But this show is 90 minutes every third week, like movies."

Translated, what this meant was that at his age and in a Hollywood economy which is a disaster area (to paraphrase Long John Silver) "them what finds work is the lucky ones."

There were other questions of about the same massive calibre of social significance, including the magna question: What's it really like to work with Doris Day?

"It was so much fun we couldn't look each other in the eye without breaking up."

Well, how about the toughest picture?

"The hardest work I ever did was in a flop, Seconds, a good picture but no box office in this country. It was successful in England," he said.

Likewise he reckoned his work in the remake of Magnificent Obsession was hard. "I did it with a broken shoulder I got surfing in an inner tube. Jane Wyman should have got an Oscar. She played the love scenes with her head against my shoulder harness," he said.

'Don't Ask Me'

Well, what about his image as the great lover of the silver screen?

"Don't ask me," he replied. But since no one else volunteered to answer for him, he continued, "I guess it's because I'm tall and women have to look up."

Has he ever feuded with any of his leading ladies?

He pondered that a moment, then slowly replied, first warning the women present to close their innocent ears and forgive him, "I was working with an actress one time who took me aside and said, 'Upstage me one more time and I'll kick the — out of you.' I didn't even know what upstaging was at the time."

He declined to name the actress. In event you're curious as Hudson was, about upstaging in a movie, it refers to a performer moving back away from the camera so the other performer must lose his or her full face or profile camera angle in order to maintain credible eye contact.

Unprintable

Then there was one more question, regarding Hudson's opinion of fan magazines in general and the type of material they use. This was asked in light of a recent no-names piece which has caused considerable embarrassment for Hudson and Jim Nabors.

He answered with a one-word unprintable expletive. And that terminated the press feeding, Hudson having run the hurdles without once touching down on anything more noteworthy than his revelation that his matching socks and slacks were an accident, purchased at separate stores at different times.

Violence on TV Link to Behavior

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Increasing scientific evidence suggests that children are using violence on television as "a partial guide for their own actions," according to researchers for a government study.

"As a result, the present entertainment of the television medium may be contributing, in some measure, to the aggressive behavior of many normal children, "they said. "Such an effect has now been shown in a wide variety of situations."

The findings were contained in a summary of a report prepared for the U.S. Surgeon General's advisory committee on television and social behavior. The entire report has not been made public yet.

The summary by two psychology professors — Robert M. Liebert of the State University of New York and Robert A. Baron of Purde University — was released at the annual American Psychological Association (APA) convention in Washington.

The National Commission on the Causes and Prevention of Violence concluded last year that violence on television encourages real violence, especially by children in poor or disorganized families. But the Liebert-Baron summary said average youngsters appeared to show similar patterns.

"At least under some circumstances, repeated exposure to televised aggression can lead children to accept what hitherto they have seen as a partial guide for their own actions," the professors said. "The weight of the evidence to date would seem to represent real progress in determinig the effect of violence upon youngsters."

Another report issued at the APA meeting offered a similar conclusion. But it cautioned that "suggestions for direct controls on violent media programming would appear to be scientifically questionable and, to say the least, premature."

Two University of Wisconsin researchers agreed in still a third report that "several recent field studies funded by the National Institute of Mental Health appear to indicate some correlation between heavy viewing of television violence and the tendencies to behave aggressively."

But the authors of this third study, Steven H. Chaffee and Jack M. McLeod, specialists in the communications field, said there was no clear evidence "whether control over violent TV content would have socially beneficial effects or possible harmful side effects."

Dr. Eli A. Rubenstein, vice-chairman of the Surgeon General's advisory committee, said "each one of these reports will be taken into consideration" by the time the panel submits its report, scheduled for completion, by year's end. But he said the committee will be working from a total of 23 studies prepared under the $1 million program.

The Liebert-Baron summary said a study of adolescents in Maryland found a relationship between preferences for violent television programs and aggressive attitudes as well as deviancy.

Tommy Dorsey will be coming back to life through Duffy, his one-time vocalist.

Duffy Is Back 'In the Mood'

By BLAIK KIRBY
The Globe and Mail

Jack Duffy has a sad, lived-in face, and a stooped, scrawny figure — 124 pounds on a frame that would be 5-foot-8 if he stood up straight. At 44, he looks as if he's been through the mill, and he has. But to clothe that face in the beaming smile of a man happy with his lot, you have only to ask him about his new TV show, In the Mood.

"Right now I'm probably at the happiest time of my life," he glows. "I'm doing what I like best, I'm working steady, and I've got a wife that I love and who loves me, we've adopted a daughter who's eight months old. For the past five years there hasn't been a time I can remember that's been down. If I didn't have this show, there'd be something else. That's the way the breaks have been going for me."

The show he's so happy about is the major new effort in the CBC's fall variety schedule — a series devoted entirely to recalling the music of the big bands of the thirties and forties, starting Sept. 16 and featuring as many of the original stars as possible.

Among them will be Benny Goodman, Count Basie (and his whole band), San Kenton, Charlie Barnet, Woody Herman, Tex Beneke. Efforts are being made to sign up Harry James, Lionel Hampton, Buddy Rich and others. And there will also be the Canadian stars of the era — Bert Niosi, Mart Kenney and his Western Gentlemen, and the sound of the late Jack Kane.

And, as host, there will be Jack Duffy, on top of the world after a very rough period when he slumped from being a star on CBC-TV to become an alcoholic living in an attic and estimating his own life expectancy at 18 months, tops.

The climb back has been slow, but absolutely steady, with constant improvement in his range and an appealing, touching, likeable communication as a character comic. He has become one of Toronto's leading performers in the demanding medium of revue.

He is, therefore, not on the big band show just because he's available. Nor because the show needs comic relief. Most people don't know that Duffy really belongs to the big band era; he earned his showbiz spurs sininging with Tommy Dorsey's band for two years, starting as a 20-year-old in 1948, when he looked like Frank Sinatra's skinny twin brother. It was an image he had a long and hard time shaking.

Later he co-starred on Perry Como's TV show from 1961 to 1963, and had his own CBC-TV show, Here's Duffy, from 1958 to 1959. When it flopped (Duffy said the biggest cause was losing star writer Frank Peppiatt, who knew Duffy and how to use him), then Duffy began the long slide downhill.

The bottom of the slide came when he found himself living alone in an attic — he was separated from his wife and daughter, now 19 — not knowing where his next dollar was coming from, and with only 10 cents in his pocket.

"I woke up and wondered whether to spend it on a cup of coffee, or a chocolate bar," he recalls. "But I was too proud to go to my friends and ask for a loan. I said, If I'm going to make it, I'm going to make it myself."

His morale, always a problem in the insecure world of performers, was so low that when friends asked him to come for Christmas dinner, he felt he was imposing by accepting.

The tide started to turn when he met Marylyn Stuart, a tiny gingery redhead. They worked together in several shows, and became a romantic as well as professional team. When they were working at Expo 67, Duffy consulted a doctor.

"He laid it on the line how long it would be before I utterly destroyed my self with booze. He said 'It won't be too long,' and I felt physically that it might be a year, a year and a half, before I'd be a derelict or dead.

"He said: 'Are you going with a girl?' I said yes. 'Do you love her?' Yes. 'Well, don't marry her if you love her. You'll only be involving another person with your problems.' That was one of the key lines he laid on me."

So Duffy spent the summer of Expo 67 drying out — he hasn't had a drink since — before seeing the doctor again. That time the conversation went:

"D'you think I can be a winner now?" "Do you think you can?" "Yes."

Duffy and Marylyn were married that September.

"I've been happy ever since," he says. "I don't think I've had any more tough breaks or hard times than anybody else. My face may not mirror this, but the bad times seem to be easy to forget and the good times are easy to remember."

NIXON TRIP

NEW YORK (AP) — The three United States telvision networks said they had formed a pool to provide coverage of President Nixon's trip to China. Nixon said he plans to visit the Chinese mainland some time prior to May, 1972. Robert Siegenthaler of ABC News is chairman of the Pool and Marshall Davidson of CBS News and James Kitchell of NBC News are vice-chairmen.

OPPOSITION DEMANDS ACTION

U.S. Freeze Hits Canadians

Jeers Greet Council Okay Of Reid Plan

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE
Times Staff

Victoria council voted exactly as expected Thursday and approved in principle the modified Reid waterfront development despite noisy opposition from a packed chamber.

About 200 people of all ages virtually took over the council meeting, shouting derisive laughter at Acting Mayor Ald. Percy Frampton's repeated demands for silence.

Several times the crowd refused to allow aldermen to be heard until they spoke into a microphone.

Only once did the crowd respect a plea for silence — when Ald. Peter Pollen said if they kept up the interruptions they would destroy democracy. However, they followed a lengthy speech by Pollen, who used the microphone, with applause and cheers.

Pollen and Ald. Tom Christie voted against further progress on the Reid development, fulfilling promises they made earlier to change their minds should enough people indicate opposition to the project.

The modified Reid complex proposed for the Wharf Street waterfront below Bastion Square includes two apartment towers of 24 and 21 storeys, as well as a theatre, a score of shops, green space, a public walking area and a water-level promenade.

It was the noisiest, best-attended council meeting in the past year. It was not a public hearing, however. On this basis, aldermen argued they were not required to speak up for the crowd's benefit.

No council session is considered an open public meeting at which people may speak out, applaud or even laugh within earshot of the chair. However, from the opening of the meeting, the crowd ignored the rules.

TRIED CHANGE

The action began when council came to an item on the agenda calling for a ban on all future high-rise development on the waterfront excepting the Reid development.

Christie immediately tried to amend the motion to eliminate the exception for Reid. The spectators refused to keep quiet until the city clerk read the amendments into a microphone placed in the chamber for use during an earlier public hearing.

Christie said "no one has approached me who is in favor of the Reid development. My phone rings constantly," he said, bringing calls from people opposing the development.

When Christie called the proposal a "disgrace," someone in the gallery shouted: "So is democracy."

He called for a show of hands from the gallery indicating opposition. He received a lot of hands and the

Oak Bay Crowd Hits Highrises

An overflow crowd of 100 Oak Bay residents at Windsor Park Pavilion Thursday condemned further high-rise development because it would cause deterioration of the municipality's residential character.

Called by the Windsor Park Neighborhood Group, most of the meeting's fire was aimed at the highrise towers proposed for the block facing Windsor Park, bounded by Currie, Goodwin, Windsor and Newport.

Developers Graham Development Ltd. and Mace Homes and Investments Ltd. plan to build two nine-storey towers containing retail outlets on the ground floor and 200 suites in the other stories.

HOLD OPTIONS

Questioned by Bertram Butler, 513 Transit, on whether the developers had bought the land, Mayor Frances Elford said that they hold options on the lots which would expire in November and December; necessitating decision-making by council by that time.

The developers have asked that the block be made a development area. The mayor said that although it was not required under the Municipal Act, a public hearing will be held Sept. 20 at 7:30 p.m. in St. Michael's School.

The hearing, she said, was called so that taxpayers could make their wishes known.

Later, another hearing, as required by the act, would be called to discuss specific plans of the developers.

BROADEN BASE

Dr. A. D. Kirk, 2453 Currie, asked what advantages highrises give the areas in which they were built. Did they, as argued, actually broaden the tax base?

He added that the cities of New York, Los Angeles and San Francisco had not convinced him that this was so.

Ald. John Goult replied that he had never been able to find evidence that highrises were beneficial to a community.

Developer Jim Mace was asked if the developers intended to raze the entire block if they did not begin construction of the two towers at the same time.

Mace estimated the entire project might take between two and two and a half years to complete. In material circulated to residents this week,

NEW TV SECTION

A full week of TV listings appears in tonight's Times opposite Page 8.

This special tabloid section can be pulled out, folded and kept handy to the television set for handy reference to daily TV programs.

This new feature will be published in every Friday's Times.

B.C. Grits Drop Support For Smoke, Drink Ad Ban

Liberal Leader Pat McGeer today announced his party no longer supports the tobacco and liquor advertising ban in British Columbia.

And NDP Opposition Leader Dave Barrett, contacted at his Coquitlam home, charged McGeer's "change of heart comes from The Vancouver Sun and nowhere else."

"If the establishment press in B.C. would only get as uptight about social injustices — 12-year-old children in training schools and the large number of Indians in jail — as it does about the loss of advertising revenue, then I would go along with its concern," he added.

McGeer called for a special legislative session to revoke the bans. The Liberals voted for the Tobacco Advertising Restraint Act and an amendment to the government Liquor Act, bills which halted tobacco and liquor advertising in B.C. Sept. 1.

The legislation was passed during the 1971 legislative session.

'CONFUSION'

McGeer charged Attorney-General Leslie Peterson evaded his administrative responsibilities to clarify the legislation by regulations.

"This has left the province in a state of confusion. We are now the laughing stock of North America, and the legislature has been made to look like an ass by Attorney-General Peterson," McGeer said.

Barrett, however, said that B.C. needs a special session of the legislature to discuss "real economic issues."

He said top priority is unemployment followed by the need for manufacturing industries to secure a good economic future for British Columbians.

'EXTINCT' OTTER RETURNS TO B.C.

The sighting of a sea otter with a pup recently off the west coast of Vancouver Island indicates a transplant of the mammals into the area has been a success.

Fish and wildlife branch officer Ian Smith of Nanaimo said Thursday a graduate student in zoology from the University of British Columbia had been studying birds in the area of Vargas Island, north of Tofino, when he sighted the sea otter and pup.

The student, Brian Hartwick, happened to have a movie camera with him at the time. Fish and wildlife branch officials who viewed the film Wednesday said the creatures were undoubtedly sea otters.

Sea otters are believed to have become extinct in B.C. in 1929. That was the time the last one was taken for commercial purposes.

Wildlife branch officials transplanted sea otters to the west coast in 1969 and 1970, but the sighting by Hartwick is the first indication that breeding has taken place.

"Our first hope was that the sea otters would survive," Smith said. "The next thing was for them to breed. We now have an indication that they have done the latter."

LOUGHEED FILLS CABINET POSTS

EDMONTON (CP) — Peter Lougheed was sworn in as premier today and he announced a 22-man Conservative cabinet to take over from 36 years of Social Credit rule.

The cabinet contains five more members than the outgoing administration and includes the new portfolios of deputy premier, and minister of federal and intergovernmental affairs. It also divides the education portfolio among two men.

Alberta Mines Recruit in Japan

EDMONTON (CP) — A shortage of experienced miners in Canada has forced coal producers in Alberta to look elsewhere for miners, including Japan.

McIntyre Porcupine Mines Ltd. has conducted a recruiting campaign in Japan and has received 52 applications for work at its Grande Cache mine, 200 miles west of here.

"Canadians won't stay in the coal mines even if they have had mining experience in eastern Canada," a provincial government mining spokesman said.

"The Grande Cache mine requires a lot of dirty manual work under close supervision. The miners from eastern Canada prefer the highly mechanized hard-rock mining."

Shuji Shigihara, Japanese consul in Edmonton, said experienced Japanese workers are needed to bring the Grande Cache mine's production up to the level called for in a 15-year contract with Japanese steel interests.

Five Japanese miners who speak English already are working at the McIntyre Porcupine mine. Another 40 are expected to arrive at Grande Cache early next year, if they can obtain visas.

One problem is that immigrants can enter Canada without speaking English or French only if they have a job and can meet various other requirements. But Alberta mine safety regulations require that miners be able to read safety regulations in English, and to know sufficient English to understand spoken warnings or to warn their fellow workers.

If the Japanese miners cannot meet this regulation, they couldn't gain employment and entry into Canada.

The mining company can solve the problem by hiring the men as trainees and teaching them English before putting them to work. McIntyre Porcupine has conducted English courses before and plans a language program for the Japanese miners.

Earlier this week, spokesmen for Japanese coal importers said in Vancouver that Japan will sign no further contracts until western Canadian mines start meeting existing contracts. The spokesmen said existing contracts might have to be reduced if the mines "can't fulfill their contracts."

The major cirticism has been directed at McIntyre Porcupine, now working on a two-million-ton-a-year contract, and Kaiser Resources Ltd., working on a five-million-ton-a-year contract. The two mines are reported to be as much as 30 per cent behind required production.

An official of District 18 of the United Mine Workers of America said today the union is not opposed to the company recruiting in Japan.

Donald McDonald of Calgary, a district representative for the union, agreed that there is a shortage of experienced miners.

He said the only place where there may be a surplus of miners is in Nova Scotia.

It was customary for the Grande Cache mine to recruit from "almost all over." There were about 500 miners at Grande Cache and they come from "almost every country in the world, including Korea."

VALLIERES 'HIDES', MISSES HEARING

MONTREAL (CP) — A note purporting to be from the terrorist Front de Liberation du Quebec, saying author Pierre Vallieres has gone into hiding, was published today by two Montreal newspapers.

Vallieres, author of White Niggers of America, did not appear in court as scheduled Tuesday to have trial dates set for trial on charges of sedition and counselling to kidnapping and murder.

The note published in Montreal-Matin and the Journal de Montreal says Vallieres went into hiding "because there are more important things for a revolutionary to do in Quebec than to submit interminably to fake political trials."

Salary Controls 'Imported'

OTTAWA (CP)—The waves from United States economic moves continued to surge through the Commons today, with opposition calls for emergency debate and charges that Canadian subsidiaries are importing President Nixon's wage freeze.

Government spokesmen said that U.S. policy does not apply in Canada and promised a check of two specific situations of wage freeze action cited by the opposition.

New Democrat Leader David Lewis said the Douglas Aircraft of Canada Ltd. plant in Toronto has refused to make a wage offer to its employees and Chrysler Canada Ltd. in Windsor, Ont. has refused to put a wage increase, previously negotiated, into effect. In both cases, Mr. Lewis said, Mr. Nixon's wage freeze was given as the reason.

Mr. Lewis called for a government statement assuring the House that Canada would not tolerate any "importing of wage freezes" from outside the country.

External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp, acting prime minister while Pierre Elliott Trudeau is on a tour of eastern Ontario ridings, said he was not aware of the Douglas and Chrysler situations. But he added that everybody knows it is the Canadian Parliament that makes Canadian laws.

Mr. Lewis said Douglas and Chrysler obviously did not know this.

Mr. Sharp said any importation of the wage freeze is "not Canadian and this is not Canadian policy."

PEPIN CHECKING

Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin, replying to further questions, said he was having the situation checked to see "how true it is."

Chrysler announced Thursday a deferment of a five-percent salary increase for many of its employees which was supposed to have been put into effect Sept. 6. The company said the move was necessary because 1972 model prices have been frozen at the 1971 level to conform with U.S. prices set under the Nixon program.

At Douglas, a spokesman said the U.S. wage freeze is the reason the company has refused to make any wage offer to employees in current contract negotiations.

A total of some 7,000 Canadian workers are involved in the two situations.

J. Patrick Nowlan (PC-Annapolis Valley) asked Mr. Pepin whether the government would re-stress the guides it drew up a few years ago on how subsidiaries of foreign companies can be good corporate citizens of Canada.

The guides are still applicable, Mr. Pepin said. He added that he has been talking with many heads of international companies in Canada since Mr. Nixon announced the import surtax last month.

In the debate on Thursday, Eric Kierans said Canada is going to have to get tough internationally to avoid slipping down the economic drain.

Mr. Kierans, who quit the Liberal cabinet in April because he disagreed with government economic policies, said Canada is faced with a productivity crisis similar to the one that prompted President Nixon's drastic change in U.S. economic policy.

While he did not recommend a price-and-wage freeze, he said labor and business and the federal and provincial governments must identify Canada's chief national goal as high employment and unify to bring it about.

PGE Carries 'The Future' to Fort Nelson

By BRUCE YEMEN
Times Staff

FORT NELSON — The future arrived in Fort Nelson today when the first train from Fort St. John pulled in to the Pacific Great Eastern Railways yards near this northern town, 80 miles from the Yukon border.

The train carried Premier W. A. C. Bennett, president of the publicly-owned railway, and about 70 executives from business, industry and government.

The premier officially opened the 250-mile stretch of track from Fort St. John in an early afternoon ceremony attended by several hundred other businessmen and enthusiastic residents of the Fort Nelson area. Population of this community is about 4,000.

GRIEVANCES

A threatened stoppage of the train by Indians claiming compensation for land crossed by the track failed to occur, but a small delegation presented grievances to government officials here today.

The clearing for the new line began in February, 1969, and 300 men were employed on construction.

Bennett inherited the publicly-owned railway almost 20 years ago with its ghastly record of losses and a track that was usually described as running from nowhere to nowhere.

He connected the southern nowhere — Squamish — to North Vancouver. He started extending the northern nowheres to what now seems almost everywhere.

The operating losses continued, but in moderating tempo until recently, when profits have been claimed. Last year an $896,000 net profit was reported.

Critics of the government, however, take the profit statements with a grain of salt, because they know the taxpayers of B.C. have $160 million in "shares" in the PGE which pay no dividends.

INTEREST

It would cost $8 million a year to pay interest of only 5 per cent on that investment. The operating revenues from the PGE amounted to $31 million last year. From that was paid more than $8 million in interest on another $170 million of funded debt.

Bennett and general manager Joe Broadbent weren't too impressed earlier this year with a federal transport official's claim that the PGE would show a $15 million annual loss if the books were figured on the same basis as other railways.

They scoffed at the claim, making special note of the fact that the PGE gets no federal subsidies, unlike other railways.

The extent to which it gets provincial subsidies is partly a result of Ottawa's refusal to share in the costs of expanding the railway. Benttnett appears to have given up real hope of federal money for the PGE.

Earlier this week the provincial cabinet allowed the PGE to increase its potential share capital from the current $160 million to $210 million, raising the prospect of another $50 million "investment" by the taxpayers in the PGE in the next year or two.

If nobody is laughing, few seem to be crying about the cost of keeping the PGE growing. Opposition parties have made little political capital out of the PGE in recent years.

It isn't so much the railway itself, but its labor policies that have attracted criticisms. The rush to finish the 250-mile extension to Fort Nel-

War on Hunger And Illness Follows Fighting

IKOT IBRITAM, Nigeria (Reuter) — Twenty months after the secessionist war in Nigeria ended, the battle is still going on to stave off hunger and disease in the most ravaged areas.

The Christian Council of Nigeria, the only non-government humanitarian organization still engaged in large-scale post-war rehabilitation work here, currently operates on a budget of more than $2.8 million to help the southern states.

But it is in this area of southeastern Nigeria that the council faces some of its most trying problems. Its small team of foreign experts and local assistants still wage daily war against malnutrition, leprosy, cholera and quashiokor, a disease caused by malnutrition.

In the small village of Ikot Ibritam, 35 miles from the ancient town of Opobo and in the centre of a mosquito-infested rain forest, Dr. Herman Gray, a German-born U.S. public health specialist and his wife, who is a nurse, direct a vast public health rehabilitation program for the council.

RESTORES FACILITIES

Assisted by a Japanese neurologist and his wife, who is a child specialist, Gray has supervised the reconstruction and re-equipping of some 96 medical institutions in the southeast since the war.

In spite of this effort and the large quantities of drugs supplied by the council, health and hunger remain its greatest challenge.

A council field report covering the first quarter of this year shows that at least 260 people died of cholera at Anua Hospital in one month alone. Although more than 20,000 were immunized by a council team in the same period, field workers here say there is still between 20 and 25 per cent infection in the Opobo area.

Gray himself believes that cholera has become endemic — like quashiokor—in the rain forest belt.

Informer Nails Bus Bombers

DETROIT (AP) — Six men whose activities were reported by an FBI informer who infiltrated the Ku Klux Klan have been charged with conspiracy to thwart court-ordered school integration in Pontiac, Mich., by bombing school buses.

One of those arrested on an FBI complaint Thursday was Robert E. Miles, 46, of Howell, Mich., who recently announced he had stepped down as Grand Dragon of the Klan in Michigan. Pontiac Police Chief William Hanger said the other five men were known Klansmen. The Klan is an extremist whites-only racist group.

The six were to be arraigned today.

The conspiracy charge carries a maximum sentence of five years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

The arrests of the six men followed by 10 days the dynamiting of school buses in the Pontiac school board parking lot. Ten vehicles were destroyed and two were damaged.

The buses were to have been used in transporting some of the 9,000 pupils in an integration plan ordered by U.S. District Judge Damon Keith to achieve racial balance in the 24,000-pupil Pontiac public school system.

The plan went into effect Tuesday, and its first three days were marked by demonstrations and confrontations between blacks and whites.

The six arrested men are charged with conspiring to violate the new federal explosives control law, the public education section of the 1968 Civil Rights Act and a federal court order.

U.S. Attorney Ralph B. Guy said the six were charged with conspiracy rather than the actual bombing because "the complaint indicates that the evidence places them in a conspiracy but not at the scene."

Neil Welsh, special agent in charge of the Detroit FBI office, said several of the men were armed with handguns when arrested.

Lockheed Will Draw $50 Million Loan

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — Lockheed Aircraft Corp. makes next week its first drawing on a $250 million government-backed loan to enable it to carry on with the TriStar airbus project.

A three-man government board Thursday night put the final seal of approval on the loan guarantee on which 30,000 jobs on both sides of the Atlantic depended. The TriStar is powered by British Rolls-Royce RB-211 engines.

Lockheed said it could not carry on without the government-backed loan because of financial troubles caused by cost overruns in defence projects and by a demand for more money for the engines.

Production of the engines is being backed by the British government because Rolls-Royce went into receivership.

Next week formal execution of all documents related to the financing program will take place, with officials of the Emergency Loan Guarantee Board, the Bank of America and the Bankers Trust Co. acting for a consortium of 24 leading U.S. banks.

WILL DRAW $50 MILLION

Lockheed will make its first drawing in New York of $50 million.

The loan is in addition to $400 million in bank loans already made to Lockheed.

It carries an interest rate of eight per cent. A treasury official said Lockheed expects to require only $155 million of the $250 million.

He said Lockheed expects to repay the loan by 1974, although the contract runs until Dec. 31, 1975.

Home to Visit Cairo

LONDON (AP) — Foreign Secretary Sir Alec Douglas-Home flies to Cairo on Sunday hoping to convince Egyptian leaders they can safely lessen their reliance on Soviet power because. They have friends in the West.

Douglas-Home also will attempt to discover if President Anwar Sadat's regime would consider entering direct peace talks with Israel.

The British minister's threeday visit will formalize London's reconciliation with Cairo since the Suez incident 15 years ago when British, French and Israeli forces invaded Egypt. Aside from attending the funeral of President Gamal Abdel Nasser, no senior British minister has been to Cairo since the early 1950s.

NOW IT'S OVER

That Lively Year With Eva's Ghost

Reporters seldom have a personal or long-lasting involvement in the stories they cover — it is always the next one that entirely absorbs them — but the bizarre reunion of Evita and Juan Peron in Madrid last week was a spectacular exception for me.

One way or the other the life of every Argentinian is still influenced by the massive shadow of Juan Domingo Peron, though he has been in his Spanish exile since 1955, and by the ghost of Maria Eva Duarte, though she died (of cancer, at 33) nearly 20 years ago. Our lives, in the year that we were based in Buenos Aires, were affected more than most. On four occasions, over 14 months, we were blown up. You could hardly ask for a more personal involvement.

jack scott

Looking back on it afterwards I always marvelled at our innocence. Apartments were very hard to come by, very expensive, yet here was this beautiful, furnished, book-lined flat, at very reasonable rent, miraculously available for sub-letting.

The regular tenant, an elderly professor of mathematics, explained that he was taking a year's sabbatical leave into the country because of a nervous breakdown. It never once occurred to us that his nerves had been broken by being regularly blown up.

It never occurred to us, either, that his elaborate instructions on how to contact the insurance agency "in the event of broken glass" was a subtle hint that we might be up to our ankles in broken glass fairly regularly. In fairness to the professor, he had mentioned the immediate presence of Admiral Rocas, but my Spanish wasn't up to it, and I simply nodded and smiled.

Though we did not know it, until the first time we were blown up, Admiral Rocas was constantly in our view. The windows of our apartment looked directly into the windows of his, a hundred yards or less across Avenida Arenales. He was an enormous, barrel-chested man who entertained lavishly at dinner parties that fascinated us because the admiral and his guests ate and drank, without pause, for approximately four hours.

The first time we were blown up we were watching Bonanza on television, the dubbed Spanish, particularly coming from Paw and Hoss Cartwright, being a painless way to increase your vocabularly.

Without warning there was a deafening explosion and every window in our apartment seemed to sigh and then simply collapsed, straight down, in shards of shattered glass. Like a well-drilled team we leaped to the door, ran down a flight of stairs and out into the street, already jammed with great crowds. Each face was turned upwards, expectantly, to the balcony of Admiral Rocas' apartment. In a moment the admiral stepped through what was left of his French doors. He looked a wreck, his bald head and dressing gown covered with white plaster, his eyes wild with shock, yet without a second's pause he had launched into a speech of such fire and eloquence that Avenida Arenales rang with the cheers of the crowd.

Thus did the Perons, the shadow of Juan, the ghost of Evita, come, explosively, into our lives.

Admiral Rocas, we learned, had been one of the leaders of that unlikely coalition of liberal politicians, military men and the Roman Catholic Church which had ended Peron's nine years of dictatorship and sent him into exile. More importantly, he was assumed to be the brains behind that strangest, most dramatic kidnapping in all political history, the theft of Evita's body.

One day the body was there, enshrined in a crystal casket in the enormous, hideous mausoleum that Peron had built in the headquarters of the General Confederation of Labor, her elegant, honey-blonde theatrical beauty restored by two incredible years of embalming. Its very presence there after the otherthrow of her husband, a wax doll holding a spray of orchids, was a constant reminder to the masses of their followers — "the shirtless ones," as the Peronista were called — of what had seemed to them days of glory. Eight people had died in the terrible crush of humanity that stood in the rain for 18 hours at her funeral and, indeed, even today she is worshipped as a saint, the candles guttering on either side of her picture in thousands of humble homes.

It was inevitable, perhaps, that this symbol must go, and the dark deed was done, so it was said, by a group of young naval officers. The mausoleum was destroyed. The crystal coffin was taken away (to Italy, we now know) and the nation was hysterically divided in a kind of dementia that still exists today.

The extremist, bomb-happy wing of the Peronista had vowed vengeance and terrorism until the body was returned. It was no idle threat. One of their prime targets was Pedro Aramburu, Argentina's provisional president when Evita's tomb was destroyed. It took 15 years, but they finally caught up with him. Aramburu was kidnapped and murdered last year.

All of this, for us, came to seem like some intimate neighborhood gossip once we'd endured our baptism of being blown up along with the old admiral.

Oddly enough, it never occurred to us to move. For one thing, an around-the-clock armed guard was put on his apartment for several weeks after each blast, the Peronista bombers waiting patiently until it had been removed. Apartments were almost impossible to find, anyway. And, besides, it had given me such a rewarding notoriety among the corps of foreign correspondents that I was often introduced as "the man who gets blown up."

Each of the four bombings was all but identical, the admiral staggering out to his balcony covered in masonry, but undaunted (his indestructibility was credited to the ineptness of his enemies in planting their explosives in air shafts) and the cheers of his followers because, of course, in an upper-income district the sentiment was strongly anti-Peron. If nothing else, as a climate for the covering of Latin-American politics, it couldn't be bettered.

And so, when the news came out last week that Evita's body had been delivered to Peron in Madrid, clearly a gesture by Argentina's military government to heal the old wounds, I could only think, irrationally, that things will seem mighty dull from now on in Avenida Arenales.

Birds Leave For a While

Time to head south spells a cloud of starlings as they depart from Victoria West for more compatible climes. Their departure will not be mourned; the unwelcome visitors are a scourge for farmers and fruit growers, who have even considered the legality of issuing deportation orders in peak visitation years. Among weapons used to fight the birds' annual invasion are guns that fire automatically, creating loud booms, tape recordings sounding the starling's warning cry, and poison. But the persistent birds can be expected back next spring anyway.

POPULATION SHIFT PARTLY BLAMED

By BRIAN BUTTERS
Times Staff

Enrolment at Greater Victoria public schools has declined dramatically from last year, according to figures released by school board officials today.

The figures show enrolment as of Wednesday in School District No. 61 was 31,621. Last year, on Sept. 8, the figure was 32,231. The decline is 610 students.

By far the largest part of the decrease was registered in elementary schools. Enrolment was down by 596 students in the lower grades.

Junior high schools registered a decrease of 107 students while senior high school showed a gain of 93 students.

District Superintendent A. J. Longmore said "shifts of population" were partly to blame for the decrease.

"It's possible wage earners in the area have found new locales with better job opportunities," Longmore said, adding that major strikes last year accounted for a smaller increase in school enrolment than in previous years.

He said it is likely the Victoria area did not gain its usual number of children through immigration because prospective residents are taking second looks at economic conditions in the areas they want to move to.

School population in the area has been increasing at about a five per cent rate in recent years, he said, but that increase had fallen off to 1.1 per cent last year. This year the decrease is likely to be about two per cent.

Longmore said higher numbers of students were expected in the Glanford-Colquitz area than actually came. Decreases were also felt in the Esquimalt area, he said.

Showing consistent gains in population were Gordon Head and other parts of Saanich. Mount Douglas Senior and Reynolds Junior-Senior both registered gains along with elementary schools like Hillcrest, Campus View and Fairburn.

For the first time in recent years, Oak Bay and Victoria senior high schools showed declines in enrolment. This trend was consistent with figures for elementary schools in the inner part of the Greater Victoria area.

In the James Bay area, population continued to decline at schools like Vic West, Lampson, Beacon Hill, James Bay and South Park. George Jay lost 45 students.

Probably the main reason for decline in school populations is the low birth figures recorded six years ago, when the children entering Grade one this year were born.

In 1965, 2,771 births were recorded in the Capital region. That figure decreased to 2,599 in 1966 and even further to 2,553 in 1967.

Greater Victoria's birth rate is well below national standards. In Canada in 1970 the birth rate was 16 births per 1,000 people. B.C.'s rate was not far off with 15.8 births per 1,000.

Greater Victoria, however, recorded only 12.7 births per 1,000 people.

These figures, especially the decline in number of births in 1967, will be felt in Victoria schools for the next few years. It was not until 1968 that births began to increase again. Those 1968 births should account for an increase in school population figures in 1974.

Longmore said part of the enrolment decrease will be balanced by late registrations by secondary students. They have until Sept. 15 to register, unlike junior secondary and elementary students.

As late as July of this year, school board officials had predicted a gain of 36 students in the Greater Victoria school population.

Wonderland Wants Quick Decision

If Saanich council is thinking of buying his Wooded Wonderland attraction it had better say so soon, owner-manager Alf Pettersen said today.

Pettersen said the children's amusement centre near Beaver Lake has been up for sale for two weeks and there are two potential buyers, so unless the council makes an early decision "it may be too late."

The possibility of taking over the attraction under municipal or regional management when the present lease expires was aired Tuesday at a meeting of the council's parks and outdoor recreation committee.

CITY GROUP

Under consideration was a report by parks administrator Bert Richman outlining various proposals for developing municipally-operated amusements in the Elk Lake-Beaver Lake area, including a zoo and a miniature railway. The report was referred to the council.

Petersen said one of the parties involved in nengotiations is a city group which he declined to name.

He said the group also wants to buy his miniature train located at Matticks Farm and run it in Wooded Wonderland, as he had earlier hoped to do himself.

The alternative transaction could result in the centre being transferred to Vancouver or Washington state, Pettersen said.

"It's going to be a case of first come, first served," he added.

He said the current two-year lease expires in May, 1973, which effectively leaves only one more guaranteed season.

Asked if this was likely to deter any purchaser wanting to run the venture on its present site, he said: "Not if it was someone like a service organization. If eel the only objection that has ever been raised to Wooded Wonderland is the fact that it is a profit-making concern, or at least supposed to be."

Pettersen has operated the walk-through attraction, peopled by fairytale characters, on the 10-acre site since 1961.

GO-CART DRIVER HURT IN CRASH WITH CAR

A 12-year-old go-cart driver is in satisfactory condition in hospital after his vehicle collided with a car on Atkins Road Thursday evening.

Archie Goldie, 2720 Winster, is in St. Joseph's Hospital with multiple injuries.

Colwood RCMP said the youngster drove out of a driveway at 460 Atkins about 7 p.m. and was in collision with a car driven by Leonard Pratt, 18, of 682 Wagar.

BROTHERS CHARGED

Two brothers appeared in court today and were charged jointly with possessing marijuana for the purposes of trafficking.

Judge E. F. N. Robinson remanded Danny Murphy, 27, and Melvin Stacy Harris, 22, to Sept. 17 for election of trial. Bail was set at $3,000.

Court was told that Murphy, an Edmonton warehouseman, and Harris, an unemployed Victoria truck driver, were apprehended at the Victoria International Airport Thursday. No other details were given.

arthur mayse

OVER THE PAST SEVERAL years, I have seen the words "conservation" and "conservationist" become increasingly suspect. That's a pity, because they are good, meaningful words that deserve a better fate than to be misapplied and misinterpreted.

A conservationist, by definition, is one who believes in the wisest possible use of natural resources.

He is neither a crank nor a nut. Even were it possible, he would not have the country restored to the state in which the first-comers found it.

He is aware of the laws of supply and demand, also the need for economic balance and the fact of growing population. As a reasonable person, he knows that timber must be harvested, fisheries exploited within safe limits, and minerals brought out of the earth.

He will fight for the preservation of a wilderness park, but not to keep the loggers out of tracts that are much better cut and replanted, or left to natural reforestation if such a course is indicated.

What he asks and all he asks — and here we come back to the definition — is that resources be put to their wisest possible use, whatever forms this may take.

I know many conservationists of that stamp. Some are private citizens. Some are knowledgeable men employed by industry, or functioning usefully in government jobs.

They are no hysterics, and they are no less aware than I am that a return to the first principles of conservation is badly needed.

I am not out to whitewash industry, or government either, for its excesses. But I also dislike to see enemies being made where support might have been gained, and conservationist aims being blunted by excesses of another sort.

The tragedy of every worthwhile movement is that it is bound to attract the extremist and the faddist. When that happens, reason goes out the window, and the movement itself stands in danger of becoming discredited.

Some months ago, I aired a conclusion in print. It wasn't hastily arrived at, and I didn't come to it sitting behind an office typewriter.

It is that while first-growth timber should be preserved in specimen tracts of generous extent, the second growth flats and sidehills provide better recreation country.

An old burn, in my opinion, offers more air and sunshine. It is less oppressive, far richer in bird and animal life, and easier to get about in.

This is a personal preference, and while some experienced outdoorsmen share it, others I heard from disagreed.

Good enough. Tastes vary. What jolted me was the reaction from still others who set my ears flapping with diatribes for which the subject under duscussion was a mere springboard into emotionalism.

I was abetting those who would destroy our province, and shouldn't be allowed space in which to air such views. And so on, to the tune of woodsman, spare that tree. Any tree. Every tree.

When a lumberman insists that an ancient forest is a green slum, he makes me laugh. But the industrialist gets his laughts too, and the danger is that the faddist who is short on knowledge and long on pseudo-conservationist double talk could get conservation laughed clear out of court.

I do not claim expert status on matters relating to the use or preservation of natural resources.

All I suggest is that the keywords of conservation are "wisest possible use," and that they could stand more thinking about.

We aren't making the wisest possible use of nature's gifts today. It may be a long and weary time until we reach so happy a state of balance. But I think we are edging by slow degrees in that direction, and urge a sane approach to a vital subject.

Conservation needs friends . . . all it can attract. I think, though, that it is currently embarrassed by many who seek the name rather than the game.

For those truly concerned with wisest possible use, this advice:

Serve conservation. But don't be deluded into going off half-cocked.

Jeers Greet Council Okay Of Reid Plan

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE
Times Staff

Victoria council voted exactly as expected Thursday and approved in principle the modified Reid waterfront development despite noisy opposition from a packed chamber.

About 200 people of all ages virtually took over the council meeting, laughing derisively at Acting Mayor Ald. Percy Frampton's repeated demands for silence.

Several times the crowd refused to allow aldermen to be heard until they spoke into a microphone.

Only once did the crowd respect a plea for silence — when Ald. Peter Pollen said if they kept up the interruptions they would destroy democracy. However, they followed a lengthy speech by Pollen, who used the microphone, with applause and cheers.

Pollen and Ald. Tom Christie voted against further progress on the Reid development, fulfilling promises they made earlier to change their minds should enough people indicate opposition to the project.

The modified Reid complex proposed for the Wharf Street waterfront below Bastion Square includes two apartment towers of 24 and 21 storeys, as well as a theatre, a score of shops, green space, a public walking area and a water-level promenade.

It was the noisiest, best-attended council meeting in the past year. It was not a public hearing, however. On this basis, aldermen argued they were not required to speak up for the crowd's benefit.

No council session is considered an open public meeting at which people may speak out, applaud or even laugh within earshot of the chair. However, from the opening of the meeting, the crowd ignored the rules.

TRIED CHANGE

The action began when council came to an item on the agenda calling for a ban on all future high-rise development on the waterfront excepting the Reid development.

Christie immediately tried to amend the motion to eliminate the exception for Reid. The spectators refused to keep quiet until the city clerk read the amendments into a microphone placed in the chamber for use during an earlier public hearing.

Christie said "no one has approached me who is in favor of the Reid development. My phone rings constantly," he said, bringing calls from people opposing the development.

When Christie called the proposal a "disgrace," someone in the gallery shouted: "So is democracy."

He called for a show of hands from the gallery indicating opposition. He received a lot of hands and the

Oak Bay Crowd Hits Highrises

An overflow crowd of 100 Oak Bay residents at Windsor Park Pavilion Thursday condemned further high-rise development because it would cause deterioration of the municipality's residential character.

Called by the Windsor Park Neighborhood Group, most of the meeting's fire was aimed at the highrise towers proposed for the block facing Windsor Park, bounded by Currie, Goodwin, Windsor and Newport.

Graham Development Ltd. and Mace Homes and Investments Ltd. plan to build two nine-storey towers containing retail outlets on the ground floor and 200 suites in the other storeys.

HOLD OPTIONS

Questioned by Bertram Butler, 513 Transit, on whether the developers had bought the land, Mayor Frances Elford said that they hold options on the lots which would expire in November and December; necessitating decision-making by council by that time.

The developers have asked that the block be made a development area. The mayor said that although it was not required under the Municipal Act, a public hearing will be held Sept. 20 at 7:30 p.m. in St. Michael's School.

The hearing, she said, was called so that taxpayers could make their wishes known.

Later, another hearing, as required by the act, would be called to discuss specific plans of the developers.

BROADEN BASE

Dr. A. D. Kirk, 2453 Currie, asked what advantages highrises give the areas in which they were built. Did they, as argued, actually broaden the tax base?

He added that the cities of New York, Los Angeles and San Francisco had not convinced him that this was so.

Ald. John Goult replied that he had never been able to find evidence that highrises were beneficial to a community.

Developer Jim Mace was asked if the developers intended to raze the entire block if they did not begin construction of the two towers at the same time.

Mace estimated the entire project might take between two and two and a half years to complete. In material circulated to residents this week,

B.C. Grits Drop Support For Smoke, Drink Ad Ban

Liberal Leader Pat McGeer today announced his party no longer supports the tobacco and liquor advertising ban in British Columbia.

And NDP Opposition Leader Dave Barrett, contacted at his Coquitlam home, charged McGeer's "change of heart comes from The Vancouver Sun and nowhere else."

"If the establishment press in B.C. would only get as uptight about social injustices — 12-year-old children in training schools and the large number of Indians in jail — as it does about the loss of advertising revenue, then I would go along with its concern," he added.

McGeer called for a special legislative session to revoke the bans. The Liberals voted for the Tobacco Advertising Restraint Act and an amendment to the government Liquor Act, bills which halted tobacco and liquor advertising in B.C. Sept. 1.

The legislation was passed during the 1971 legislative session.

'CONFUSION'

McGeer charged Attorney-General Leslie Peterson evaded his administrative responsibilities to clarify the legislation by regulations.

"This has left the province in a state of confusion. We are now the laughing stock of North America, and the legislature has been made to look like an ass by Attorney-General Peterson," McGeer said.

Barrett, however, said that B.C. needs a special session of the legislature to discuss "real economic issues."

He said top priority is unemployment followed by the need for manufacturing industries to secure a good economic future for British Columbians.

'EXTINCT' OTTER RETURNS TO B.C.

The sighting of a sea otter with a pup recently off the west coast of Vancouver Island indicates a transplant of the mammals into the area has been a success.

Fish and wildlife branch officer Ian Smith of Nanaimo said Thursday a graduate student in zoology from the University of British Columbia had been studying birds in the area of Vargas Island, north of Tofino, when he sighted the sea otter and pup.

The student, Brian Hartwick, happened to have a movie camera with him at the time. Fish and wildlife branch officials who viewed the film Wednesday said the creatures were undoubtedly sea otters.

Sea otters are believed to have become extinct in B.C. in 1929. That was the time the last one was taken for commercial purposes.

Wildlife branch officials transplanted sea otters to the west coast in 1969 and 1970, but the sighting by Hartwick is the first indication that breeding has taken place.

"Our first hope was that the sea otters would survive," Smith said. "The next thing was for them to breed. We now have an indication that they have done the latter."

LOUGHEED FILLS CABINET POSTS

EDMONTON (CP) — Peter Lougheed was sworn in as premier today and he announced a 22-man Conservative cabinet to take over from 36 years of Social Credit rule.

The cabinet contains five more members than the outgoing administration and includes the new portfolios of deputy premier, and minister of federal and intergovernmental affairs. It also divides the education portfolio among two men.

Alberta Mines Recruit in Japan

EDMONTON (CP) — A shortage of experienced miners in Canada has forced coal producers in Alberta to look elsewhere for miners, including Japan.

McIntyre Porcupine Mines Ltd. has conducted a recruiting campaign in Japan and has received 52 applications for work at its Grande Cache mine, 200 miles west of here.

"Canadians won't stay in the coal mines even if they have had mining experience in eastern Canada," a provincial government mining spokesman said.

"The Grande Cache mine requires a lot of dirty manual work under close supervision. The miners from eastern Canada prefer the highly mechanized hard-rock mining."

Shuji Shigihara, Japanese consul in Edmonton, said experienced Japanese workers are needed to bring the Grande Cache mine's production up to the level called for in a 15-year contract with Japanese steel interests.

Five Japanese miners who speak English already are working at the McIntyre Porcupine mine. Another 40 are expected to arrive at Grande Cache early next year, if they can obtain visas.

One problem is that immigrants can enter Canada without speaking English or French only if they have a job and can meet various other requirements. But Alberta mine safety regulations require that miners be able to read safety regulations in English, and to know sufficient English to understand spoken warnings or to warn their fellow workers.

If the Japanese miners cannot meet this regulation, they couldn't gain employment and entry into Canada.

The mining company can solve the problem by hiring the men as trainees and teaching them English before putting them to work. McIntyre Porcupine has conducted English courses before and plans a language program for the Japanese miners.

Earlier this week, spokesmen for Japanese coal importers said in Vancouver that Japan will sign no further contracts until western Canadian mines start meeting existing contracts. The spokesmen said existing contracts might have to be reduced if the mines "can't fulfill their contracts."

An official of District 18 of the United Mine Workers of America said today the union is not opposed to the company recruiting in Japan.

Donald McDonald of Calgary, a district representative for the union, agreed that there is a shortage of experienced miners.

He said the only place where there may be a surplus of miners is in Nova Scotia.

It was customary for the Grande Cache mine to recruit from "almost all over." There were about 500 miners at Grande Cache and they come from "almost every country in the world, including Korea."

VALLIERES 'HIDES', MISSES HEARING

MONTREAL (CP) — A note purporting to be from the terrorist Front de Liberation du Quebec, saying author Pierre Vallieres has gone into hiding, was published today by two Montreal newspapers.

Vallieres, author of White Niggers of America, did not appear in court as scheduled Tuesday to have trial dates set for trial on charges of sedition and counselling to kidnapping and murder.

The note published in Montreal-Matin and the Journal de Montreal says Vallieres went into hiding "because there are more important things for a revolutionary to do in Quebec than to submit interminably to fake political trials."

Salary Controls 'Imported'

OTTAWA (CP)—The waves from United States economic moves continued to surge through the Commons today, with opposition calls for emergency debate and charges that Canadian subsidiaries are importing President Nixon's wage freeze.

Government spokesmen said that U.S. policy does not apply in Canada and promised a check of two specific situations of wage freeze action cited by the opposition.

New Democrat Leader David Lewis said the Douglas Aircraft of Canada Ltd. plant in Toronto has refused to make a wage offer to its employees and Chrysler Canada Ltd. in Windsor, Ont. has refused to put a wage increase, previously negotiated, into effect. In both cases, Mr. Lewis said, Mr. Nixon's wage freeze was given as the reason.

Mr. Lewis called for a government statement assuring the House that Canada would not tolerate any "importing of wage freezes" from outside the country.

External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp, acting prime minister while Pierre Elliott Trudeau is on a tour of eastern Ontario ridings, said he was not aware of the Douglas and Chrysler situations. But he added that everybody knows it is the Canadian Parliament that makes Canadian laws.

Mr. Lewis said Douglas and Chrysler obviously did not know this.

Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin, replying to further questions, said he was having the situation checked to see "how true it is."

Chrysler announced Thursday a deferment of a five-percent salary increase for many of its employees which was supposed to have been put into effect Sept. 6. The company said the move was necessary because 1972 model prices have been frozen at the 1971 level to conform with U.S. prices set under the Nixon program.

At Douglas, a spokesman said the U.S. wage freeze is the reason the company has refused to make any wage offer to employees in current contract negotiations.

A total of some 7,000 Canadian workers are involved in the two situations.

J. Patrick Nowlan (PC-Annapolis Valley) asked Mr. Pepin whether the government would re-stress the guides it drew up a few years ago on how subsidiaries of foreign companies can be good corporate citizens of Canada.

The guides are still applicable, Mr. Pepin said. He added that he has been talking with many heads of international companies in Canada since Mr. Nixon announced the import surtax last month.

In the debate on Thursday, Eric Kierans said Canada is going to have to get tough internationally to avoid slipping down the economic drain.

While he did not recommend a price-and-wage freeze, he said labor and business and the federal and provincial governments must identify Canada's chief national goal as high employment and unify to bring it about.

NELSON FORKS NEXT STOP

By BRUCE YEMEN
Times Staff

FORT NELSON — Premier Bennett announced today that survey crews are now working on plans to extend the Pacific Great Eastern to Nelson Forks, 80 miles north of Fort Nelson, near the Yukon border.

Bennett said the extension is part of "a double advance into the North."

PGE rails are expected to reach Dease Lake in 1974, he said, and from there "opportunity beckons us even farther north . . . perhaps a link with Alaska's state railway."

Bennett made the announcement during official opening ceremonies for the 250-mile rail link between Fort St. John and Fort Nelson.

GRIEVANCES

A threatened stoppage of the train by Indians claiming compensation for land crossed by the track failed to occur, but a small delegation presented grievances to government officials here today.

The clearing for the new line began in February, 1969, and 300 men were employed on construction.

Bennett inherited the publicly-owned railway almost 20 years ago with its ghastly record of losses and a track that was usually described as running from nowhere to nowhere.

He connected the southern nowhere — Squamish — to North Vancouver. He started extending the northern nowheres to what now seems almost everywhere.

The operating losses continued, but in moderate tempo until recently, when profits have been claimed. Last year an $896,000 net profit was reported.

Critics of the government, however, take the profit statements with a grain of salt, because they know the taxpayers of B.C. have $160 million in "shares" in the PGE which pay no dividends.

INTEREST

It would cost $8 million a year to pay interest of only 5 per cent on that investment. The operating revenues from the PGE amounted to $31 million last year. From that was paid more than $8 million in

SELL MAGAZINES

FORT NELSON — Attorney-General Peterson said today that national publications containing liquor and cigarette ads should continue to be sold in B.C. until the government's legislation banning such advertising is clarified by the courts.

He said the magazines should be distributed "so the public may continue to have the benefit of the publication."

The court case which may clarify the advertising ban was launched during the summer against the government by eight companies. The case is expected to be heard later this fall.
